Trailer park owners make bid for Ride

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

The rejection of Ride for Sight by Minden council has prompted one area couple to take matters into their own hands.

The owners of South Lake Trailer Park, Ken and Bev Vivian, have offered their 102-acre park in Snowdon to Ride organizers.

"We usually just mind our own business," says Mrs. Vivian. But when they read in the paper of council's decision not to host the Ride at the Community Centre, they took action.

"We've been blessed, no one in our family has gone blind." (The Ride raises money for eye disease research.) Her mother-in-law was in danger of losing her sight but was saved by an operation.

Mrs. Vivian says that a charity, much like Ride for Sight, provided the money doctors needed to perform the delicate operation.

"The Ride is such a good cause, we shouldn't have lost it."

The Vivians have already received support from many area businesses and residents, including some of park's neighbors.

But some neighbors have not been supportive, and Mrs. Vivian can understand why.

"I know there will be problems and I know we won't sleep much that weekend, but it won't be much different than a normal long weekend."

The Vivians would only charge riders $2 to $2.50 per person to stay for the weekend. This would not cover the Vivian's costs of building a small roadway into the park and providing portable toilets. But they do not mind.

"Anything for the Ride for Sight," she says.

At the moment the Vivians are waiting to see what will develop when a petition supporting the Ride is presented before Minden council on October 25th.

Already, the Vivian's trailer park has been visited by Ride chairman, Syd Collier. The Vivians are competing against several other possible Ride locations, including Fenelon Falls, but they are hopeful.

"At the moment we are just sitting back and waiting, and planning."

Parents still seek redress

by BRIAN RODNICK

It has been over two weeks since seven-year-old Amber White tumbled into a hole outside her parents' home, and her parents are still waiting to hear whether or not the municipality will cover their subsequent costs.

The gaping six-foot-deep hole, filled with murky water, opened up near the back stairs of the house. The hole seems to have opened up over the remains of an old septic tank. It

KUDOS FOR LOUGHEED

A PLEASANT SURPRISE: Val Lougheed shows her delight at being named Highlander of the Year last Wednesday. The award was presented by Bill Payne, left, in recognition of Lougheed's work in creating the Minden sled dog derby and building it over the past six years into the biggest race of its type in the world.

Tough times easier to identify than solutions, Chamber told

by LEN PIZZEY

High taxes, shrinking advertising budgets and crumbling infrastructures are contributing to tough times in Ontario's tourism industry, MPP Dennis Drainville told members of the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce last Wednesday night. And while the litany of problems is well known, solutions remain elusive, suggested the newly elected NDP member for Victoria/Haliburton.

In keeping with the NDP commitment to be open and honest with the electorate, Drainville was forthright on his limited knowledge of tourism.

"What I know about tourism could fit in a thimble" said Drain-ville, who has been a resident of Haliburton County for only three years. He called on local people to give him "the education that I really need" about challenges facing the area's major industry.

Taxes are a major burden for Ontario businesses trying to compete with other markets, notably the United States, for tourism dollars, Drainville said. Eighty five percent of all tourism-related businesses have fewer than 50 employees, and they are being hurt by the Employer Health Tax, (which boosts payroll costs by up to two percent).

Other tax burdens include the huge levy on alcoholic beverages — more than $15 on and $18.95 bottle of whiskey, for example — and the five percent tax levied by the province on room rentals.

High costs discourage Americans from visiting Ontario tourist facilities and prompt Ontarians to head south. In 1989, trips by Ontario residents within the province plunged by 25 percent, but visits to the United States grew by 20 percent, Drainville said.

Poor roads and infrastructure, especially a lack of winter facilities, hurt Ontario's ability attract tourism dollars, Drainville noted.

Proposals put forth by the industry group Tourism Ontario have been made known to the government, and will receive careful consideration, Drainville suggested. They include unrestricted Sunday shopping, (something the NDP would have trouble with, Drainville said); a reduction in the Employer Health Tax from two percent of payroll to half a percent; a 10 percent reduction in taxes on liquor and a 20 percent reduction in taxes on Ontario wines; the elimination of the five

Devoted musher wins race for the top Highlander

by LEN PIZZEY
Publisher

The woman who is the driving force behind Minden's highly successful sled dog derby has been named Highlander of the Year for 1990.

Val Lougheed was presented with the award at the annual meeting of the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce last Wednesday, in recognition of her contribution to life in the Highlands.

Lougheed and her husband, Steve, have been involved with breeding and racing sled dogs for many years. Six years ago they joined with a number of Minden business people to organize the first Minden Sled Dog Derby. From humble beginnings in 1985, the event is now the largest short course sled dog derby in the world. Sponsored by Martin Feed Mills of Elmira and known as the Minden Techni-cal Challenge, the two day event offers a total purse of $20,000 and attracts competitors from across North America.

It is also popular with local residents and visitors, who line Minden's Main Street to watch teams and mushers compete in five and ten kilometre sprint races.

In addition to serving as president of Minden Sled Dog Derby Inc., the organizing body of the Minden races, Lougheed is president of the Canadian Federation of Sled Dog Sport and a member of the International Sled Dog Racing Association. She also operates her own business, Northern Lights Vocational Services.

Bill Payne, who presented the award to Lougheed on behalf of the Chamber, read a telegram of congratulations from Don and Wally Martin of Martin Feed Mills, whose sponsorship of the Minden races has been a key factor in attracting an international field of competitors.

The award took Lougheed completely by surprise, but she was quick to share the accolade with her fellow organizers and the community. The derby has become the largest of its kind "because of all the people here" she told the audience of Chamber of Commerce members. "Mushers say they never feel so special as when they come to the Highlands."

"What we've got here is magic," Lougheed said. "Just keep doing it."

Former MPP honoured

Another longtime supporter of tourism in the Highlands was also honoured by the Chamber last Wednesday. Former MPP John Eakins, who retired from politics prior to the September election, was presented with an honorary life membership in the Chamber in recognition of his 15 years of service to area people.

Chamber vice president Bob Stinson, who presented the award, said people have "very high respect for John Eakins," and noted that throughout his years at Queen's Park, Eakins never compromised his ideals.

In accepting the award, Eakins said he was "deeply proud that the Haliburton Chamber, under the leadership of Bob Stinson, was very close to the top of all the Chambers in the province."

"There are always ups and downs," Eakins said, urging his audience to "never be discouraged."

"I feel very close to the Haliburton Chamber and the Haliburton people" Eakins said. "I am very touched and very honoured."

Chamber board sees 4 new members elected

Four new members have joined eight incumbents on the board of directors of the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce.

A total of 13 names were on the ballot for the 12 seats on the Chamber board, and there were no nominations from the floor at the annual meeting last Wednesday.

The four new directors are Rhonda Elstone of G. Elstone Construction, who has previously served on the board; Kim Ward of Wig-a-Mog Inn; George Logan, who operates Logan Barbecue Service and a cleaning business; and Godfrey Tyler of Waverly Brook Farm.

Returning to the board for another term are Lyn Stevens of Red Umbrella Inn, most recently president of the Chamber; Bob Stinson, vice president of the Chamber and former owner of Willow Beach Cottages; Shawn Hagerman, a Mutual Life underwriter who has been treasurer of the Chamber; Dennis Casey of Birch Point Lodge; Curtis Eastmure of Maple Sands Inn; Anne Larcade, owner of Intra Town and Country Travel; Jenny Rendall, representing the Haliburton Highlands Nordic Trails Association; and Anne Barker, who operates a catering service and serves on Stanhope council.

The 13th and unsuccessful candidate for a board seat was John Moulton of Rishor, Barnes and Dietrich Real Estate.

should have been filled in in the seventies when the sewer line was put through the village.

"I thought it was the responsibility of the municipality to put it done when the sewer was put in," said Beverly White.

On the Monday following the accident, Reeve Bill Davis paid a visit to the Whites' and said that there was a good chance the municipality would pay to have the tank taken care of, Mrs. White says.

Within a week after the accident, the Whites sent a formal letter to council but have not received any news.

In the meantime, the Whites have filled in the tank. Not all bills have been received yet, but they've spent at least $120 on sand.

But the Whites are optimistic that the town will lend a hand, and as for Amber, Mrs. White said everything is back to normal.

Noise unabated in Lutterworth

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

Lutterworth council has decided to drop the idea of instituting a noise by-law.

At Thursday's meeting, By-law Enforcement Officer Ernie Roylance presented council with samples of by-laws that have been adopted by a number of areas, including Dysart, Lindsay and Minden.

Three of the councillors voted against using any of them because they were too vague. The Minden by-law which prohibits shouting from 12 p.m. to 7 a.m. was brought forward as the best by-law, but councillors were not impressed.

"I think this would cause us more hardships than benefit us," said Councillor Lisa Mercer.

Mercer focused on sections which stated "that no person shall make an unusual noise", and shouting between the above designated hours would be prohibited.

She could not see how this by-law could be enforced effectively without any clear definitions as to what constitutes an "unusual noise".

The noise by-law issue was then set aside and will undoubtedly make an appearance before council at a later date.

MAN OF THE HOUR: Former MPP John Eakins, who retired before the September election, was made an honorary life member of the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce last Wednesday. He said he was deeply touched by the honour, which recognized his 15 years of service.

percent room tax; a commitment to spend all motor vehicle taxes on road improvements; and measures to encourage investment in the tourism industry.

Environmental issues are a major focus of the NDP platform, notably the impact of acid rain, and "we need to do more on this," Drainville said.

The provincial government's tourism advertising budget was $25.6 million in 1989, and unchanged in 1990. Drainville said he will advocate "an increase in that budget" to give the province "a stronger voice." He pledged to work with area people "to see that the area becomes more prosperous in the future."

"I am as close as your telephone, and will respond to questions,"

Drainville said. He also revealed that he hopes to use a recreational vehicle to visit communities throughout the riding from May to October, giving people an opportunity to express their concerns directly to him.

As well as talking about the tourism industry, Drainville used the occasion to compliment others honoured by the Chamber last Wednesday night: John Eakins, who he said is "a very down-to-earth, kind person" and a "fine and decent person"; Echo publisher Len Pizzev and Minden Times publisher Jack Brezina, who were recognized for their papers' contribution to community life; and Highlander of the Year Val Lougheed, who has been instrumental in the growth of Minden's internationally recognized sled dog derby.

Decades later, plans are underway for Glebe Park

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

Almost 25 years after the municipality took possession of the land, Dysart et al will be presented with a report outlining what can be done with Glebe Park.

For several months a study of the park has been conducted by landscape architect, Dan Loukras. He has put together what he calls "conceptual drawings" of what the park could look like. These will be presented in November to council which will then have to decide what can be done.

Loukras says his ideas could be used in a multi-year plan format; it would be up to council to decide how to go about it.

"The main thing to do is the right thing, just don't jump in and change everything," said Dysart's former reeve, Murray Fearrey.

The park, 200 acres on the northwest shore of Head Lake, was sold to the municipality by St. George's Anglican Church for $18,000 in the late 1960s. (Glebe means church land.) The only stipulation was that the land remain as a park, not to be sold for commercial development.

Since then the park has remained virtually unchanged from its natural state. In 1985 the first major development occurred when the Haliburton Legion received a $50,000 provincial grant to put on the first Bluegrass festival.

The grant paid for the bandshell, streetlights, and to have about five acres cleared of trees.

Now five years later, the only two major events hosted in the park are Bluegrass and the Highland Games. The rest of the year the park practically sits empty. This has had some people wondering why.

"The park intrigues most of my visitors," says museum curator Tom Ballantine. "They seem to really envy Haliburton for having this much parkland on the water. They would give their eye teeth to have this."

However, Ballantine would not like to see many more areas cleared of bush, even though he says many people are intimidated by uncleared land and will stay away. "I would like to see everything remain green."

He also suggests that a separate entrance be built into the park. This would alleviate the traffic congestion on Bayshore Acres Road whenever an event is held at the park.

discuss the issue and possibly a public committee made up of nearby residents of the park would be created to offer suggestions.

But before any decisions can be made, Councillor Jim Parish said that council should decide what type of events can the park accommodate. "We have been going in circles

'People really envy Haliburton for having this much parkland on the water.' What should we do with it?

Dysart council has already taken this suggestion to heart. Reeve Bill Davis said at council's last meeting that negotiations were under way to build a new road off of Highway 118, through the Northwood Inn property. Davis also said that a public meeting would be held to and we haven't come to any conclusions," he said.

Parish is worried that events such as Bluegrass are growing in size too fast for the park to handle, and this creates policing and crowd control problems.

County planner wants new work arrangement with municipalities

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

A new partnership is developing between Lutterworth council and the county's planner.

Mark Stagg, who is overseeing the county's drafting of an Official Plan, wants the county to hire a junior planner. This person would work with municipalities to serve their needs.

This way, if by-law amendments are applied for, the municipality would not have to seek outside professional help.

The idea was well received by all members of the council.

"You will get somebody who knows the land, not just by a map," said Councillor Lisa Mercer.

Reeve Carol Puffer said later that a local planner who was more knowledgeable about the area would speed up the process.

At the present time, the township has had to rely on the services of a Coburg-based planner.

"We never get the response as quickly as we want," said Puffer. "Instead of being down in Coburg, the planner would just be up the road."

The county would charge a "fee for service." But Puffer said that even with a fee, the local planner would cost at least 30 per cent less than an outside planner.

Ironically, just minutes before Stagg's letter was brought before council, By-law Enforcement Officer Ernie Roylance said that his work became backed up this summer because there was so much construction. He suggested to council that another staff member be hired for the Building Department.

It is expected that this county planning service would be available sometime in 1991. This arrangement has been adopted by many counties around Ontario, Stagg said in his letter to council.

HCDC opens doors to world partners

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The Haliburton County Development Corporation has found a way to help local businesses cash in on markets around the globe.

As a new member of the World Trade Network, "we can access an electronic bulletin board which lists products for sale and people looking for products," says HCDC Manager Andy Campbell.

For instance, recently there was someone looking for wood to make work: canoe builders, Applied Stress Technology, Picard and Holden, Axiom loudspeakers.

Businesses can also benefit by finding good deals on products they want. Someone who wants to do a promotion might ask for information on the inexpensive watches noted on the bulletin. Of course, they may find out they have to buy 10,000, but the price is right.

"There might be end lines and discount prices," Campbell notes. There might also be obscure products such as resin and pigskins, which were on a recent bulletin.

THE SPIRIT OF COMMUNITY: Chamber director Shawn Hagerman presented the new Director's Award to the publishers and staff of the county's local newspapers. Minden Times publisher Jack Brezina, centre, and Echo publisher Len Pizze, right, are among a rapidly diminishing number of independent newspaper owner/publishers, and their efforts to reflect the life of the community were recognized through the award.

Chamber honours newspapers' efforts

The Haliburton County Echo and The Minden Times were recognized for their efforts by the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce.

The Director's Award of Business Excellence is a new feature of the Chamber's annual meeting. As introduced by Shawn Hagerman, it is for businesses which "have demonstrated leadership, not only in the quality and innovation to service of their customers and clients, but also have contributed in their unique way to improving the quality of life within our community."

Both newspapers have "dared and dreamed and overcome many difficulties on the road to excellence."

"They are an integral part of our community. The week just doesn't seem complete without them. We have paid them money, agreed with them, got angry at them, started fires with them and, before recycling, thrown them in the dump."

In the summer of 1989, The Minden Times' poster campaign in response to the neo-Nazi rally "united all those in our community" and showed "racism and bigotry has no place in our midst." It won a national community newspapers award for this contribution.

The Echo's "hard-working staff" has won many awards, including best newspaper in Canada in our circulation category in the past two years.

"I think we have become accustomed to the level of involvement and effort it takes to put together and publish a small-town newspaper," Hagerman said. "I travel to other communities and there is a steady progression of the small weeklies being bought out by urban chains who then begin a homogenized, urban, bottom line conformity to the dozen of papers within their control."

"We in this community are truly blessed with not one but two active, thoughtful and community spirit driven publications."

"Everyone at The Echo is both pleased and proud of this recognition," says publisher Len Pizze. "We strive to produce a newspaper which not only reports the news, but is an exploration of what it means to live in Haliburton County. It's gratifying to know others share in our beliefs."

"I see Haliburton County increasing its export potential" with World Trade Network.

pallets. Because the HCDC is now a member, Campbell can phone local companies such as the Wilberforce Planing Mill with the news. If the mill is interested and wants more information, it asks Campbell for a computer printout. It's then up to the company to decide if it wants to pursue the bid.

"I see Haliburton County increasing its export potential," says Campbell. There are many small manufacturers here and they are often overlooked when tourism is stressed. Campbell can easily list off a score of local companies he feels can benefit from the World Trade Net-

A local business may also have something they want to sell. They can buy space on the screen to advertise their product. (Just a brief description appears at first. Potential customers then can link into an expanded version.)

WTN links 100 world trade centres and 3,000 of their clients and affiliates. If every participating member asked about the information on their computer screen, there would be as many as 3.5 million readers.

Anyone who is interested in the WTN is asked to contact Campbell at the Haliburton office, 457-3555.

Latest invasion is fought with a needle

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

The last big invasion was Russian, before that it was Asian and Spanish.

The invasion this winter will be from Shanghai and this enemy will be taking no prisoners. Flu season is back.

It has been estimated that at least 2,000 Canadians die each year from influenza complications, such as pneumonia. Overall, this deadly combination accounts for three per cent of deaths in Canada.

Statistics show that people over the age of 65 are the most susceptible and should visit their doctor for a vaccination as soon as possible.

But the elderly are not the only ones who have cause for concern. Studies show anyone with a chronic medical condition, such as heart, lung or kidney disease, or diabetes, are also highly susceptible to the bug.

The National Advisory Committee on Immunization (NACI) reports that only 30 per cent of the those people in the high risk groups are vaccinated. There are more than five million Canadians who fit in to these high risk categories.

In financial terms, it has been estimated that influenza costs $500,000,000 per year in Canada because people can't work. Every year at least 70,000 hospital admissions are made and at least one million hospital beds are filled.

The Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge Health Unit suggests that everyone who is in the high risk category get their 'flu shot. The vaccination provides at least 70 to 90 per cent protection from the highly contagious bug.

The vaccination is completely safe and most people do not have a reaction to it. However, if you are allergic to eggs or egg products, then you should not be vaccinated because there may be minute traces of egg protein in the vaccination. The Health Unit also recommends that anyone who is connected with the high risk group — doctors, nurses, health care workers — also get vaccinated. As well, anyone in the food service industry or who holds a valuable work position, such as a firefighter or police officer, should also get a shot.

Even if you are a healthy person then the best way to stay healthy this winter is to visit your doctor now, and get vaccinated.

A quake in the night rattles area

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Shake, rattle and role. At 3:05 am last Thursday morning, hundreds of people throughout Quebec and Ontario were awakened by an earthquake. Slumberers in Haliburton were no exception.

"I woke up and told my husband that the bed was shaking," said elementary school teacher Nancy Bishop.

Bishop could not convince her husband that an earthquake had occurred and was given proof later that morning when she heard about it on her car radio.

The quake also woke up Jerry Coulas of Patrick Books. He said that his cat jumped off the bed and his dogs started to bark. "I got up and had a cigarette and turned on the radio to hear if there was any news."

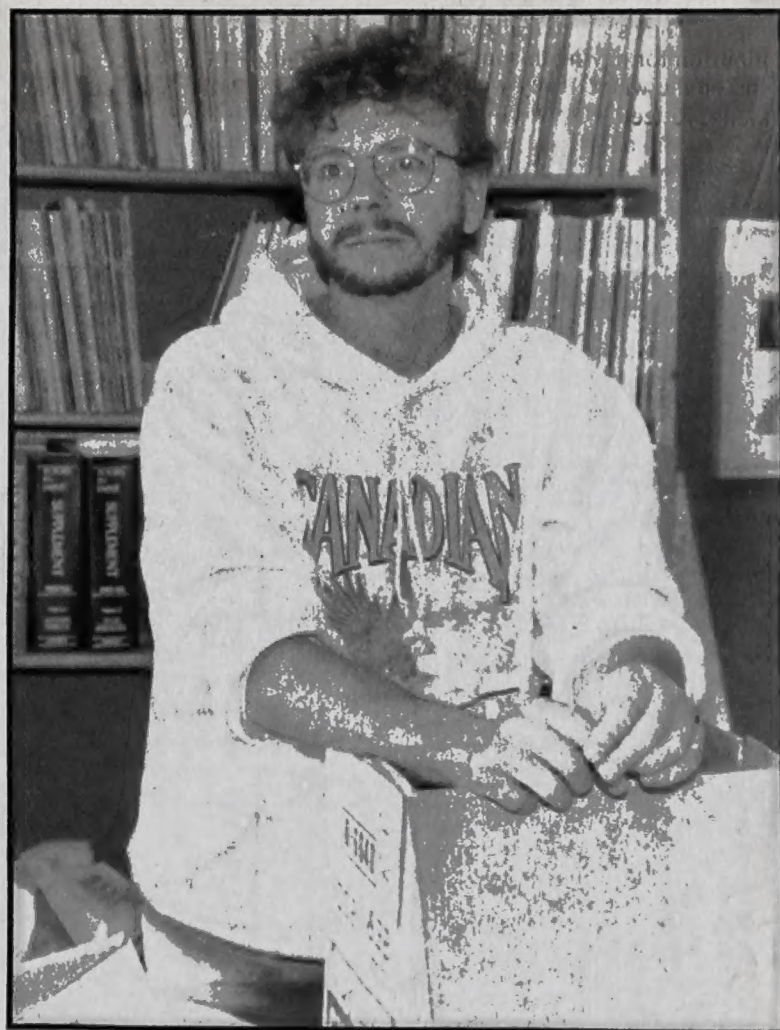

Luckily the quake did not cause any damage for neither Coulas nor Bishop, and so far no damage has been reported anywhere in the county.

The quake registered 5.5 on the Richter scale and lasted at least 10 seconds. The Quebec earthquake was centered approximately 100 miles north of Ottawa and shocks were felt from Quebec City to Windsor.

This marks the second time in less than two years that a powerful earthquake has struck southern Ontario. Scientists say that earthquakes happen all the time in this area, but that they occur hundreds of feet down where shocks hardly register.

Jerry Coulas's dogs started barking

Glebe's future debated

"If we keep condoning what's going on (Bluegrass) and it gets bigger and bigger, you eventually will have 9,000 people there."

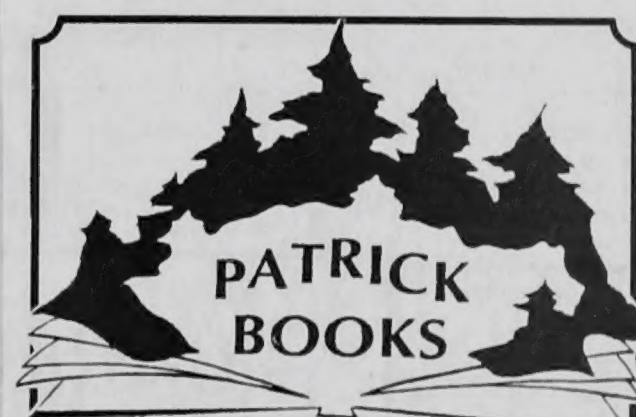

However, Mabel Brannigan, a Legion Bluegrass organizer, says that plans are already underway to prevent a re-occurrence of last summer's rowdiness. "There was a problem with security," she said, "but we have set up a meeting with the OPP next month to discuss it."

While the issue of crowds is one thing that council has to take in to consideration, another is cost. Davis says one of the reasons that it has taken so long to develop Glebe Park is the lack of funds. "There certainly have been many more pressing priorities."

Davis says once council gets a chance to examine Loukras's drawings and report, it will begin to formulate a plan with suggestions also coming from the public.

"I'm hoping that the question on what to do with the park will be answered by the people at public meetings," he says.

Tobacco ban will cause little stir among local pharmacies

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

The decision to ban the sale of tobacco in Ontario pharmacies won't affect many local pharmacies — most stopped selling tobacco several years ago.

"It is wonderful news," said Margarit Wing, pharmacist at Jasco Drug Mart in Haliburton. "As health care professionals we should be promoting good health, not selling cigarettes."

Wing said she is surprised that the College of Pharmacists would impose a ban on tobacco. Many larger stores fear losing business. But Wing says the effects will hardly be noticeable for most pharmacies and any one who wishes to buy tobacco will just go elsewhere.

Jasco Drug Mart has not carried tobacco since it moved to its new space upstairs from the doctors' office three years ago.

Her feelings were shared by Guardian Drug's pharmacist. "It has been a long time coming," says Dr. Amin Shivji. Neither the Haliburton nor Minden Guardian stores have carried tobacco, nor do they carry smoking paraphernalia, such as pipe cleaners or lighters.

"Pharmacies sell cigarettes to draw people into the store," he said. "There is very little money to be made by selling cigarettes."

Dr. Shivji said in the past he has been asked how can pharmacies sell tobacco if they are supposed to promote good health? He could never answer that question.

"This ruling should be good for both the public and the profession," he said.

Group learns of suicide prevention techniques

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Suicide is never easy to deal with. But a group of local women now have a better idea of how to prevent it.

The two-day suicide prevention training course was attended by 20 people connected with the care giving field: social workers, teachers, youth workers, family and marital counsellors.

"It has been a wonderful, very intense two days," said Gena Robertson, a member of the Haliburton Social Action Committee which organized the seminars.

The training program, or Foundation Workshop, was developed eight years ago by the Canadian Mental Health Association (CMHA). Since then more than 15,000 persons world-wide have received training.

"It is the only suicide prevention program that is accepted in formal literature," said Barb Moffatt, executive director of the Peterborough CMHA. Moffatt was also one of the organizers of last week's workshop.

"The participants were excellent. They were responsive, attentive, enthusiastic," she said. "It shows that there is a real caring feeling in this community."

The actual contents of the workshop is confidential and is set up in a five-step plan. The first step is an introduction, when the participants get to know one another and learn what will be covered in the rest of the program.

The next four steps cover various topics, such as general knowledge about suicides, attitudes, how to intervene and what resources are available to help.

But the course is not restricted to just those in health care. Anyone can participate and is urged to do so.

The course costs $100, which includes everything but your hotel room — a price which volunteer Alfreda Ford says is worth it. "The price is not that high and we have kept it low because of the importance of the subject."

Due to the success of last week's workshop, Robertson said that another is planned for June of 1991. Last week's workshop was held at the PineStone Inn.

READY TO LEND A HELPING HAND: These are some of the 20 people who took part in a two-day suicide prevention workshop last week. The workshop was sponsored by the Haliburton Social Action Committee and as called a success by one of the organizers, Gena Robertson (front centre). After two "intense" days of training, they'll now be better prepared to handle a suicide situation. Another session is being planned.

A RESIDENT'S THANKS: Haliburton Extendicare administrator Jane Rosenberg congratulates Bernice Shaw on her heart-warming speech at last Thursday's Volunteer Appreciation Night at the Legion.

Volunteers make Extendicare residents' lives more fulfilling

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Bernice Shaw was a woman of few words on Thursday night, but the emotion in her voice spoke volumes.

"I'd like to express my sincere thanks for your interest, your labours and seeing us through the difficult times," said the overwhelmed 81-year-old resident of Extendicare Haliburton Nursing Home.

More than 100 people give freely of their time to make Extendicare a nicer place to live and on Thursday night, Extendicare said thanks. Eighty volunteers were treated to a roast beef dinner at the Legion in what has become an annual event.

"It's not an act of charity, but an act of love which our residents so justly deserve," said volunteer Ann Schell, who proceeded Mrs. Shaw in the speech-making. She started visiting through her church but quickly signed herself up for more and more activities.

Now Mrs. Schell is the home's volunteer co-ordinator (a volunteer job.) When trying to describe why she can't stay away from Extendicare, she talked of the "great feelings I received of respect and love from residents and staff."

"I wish we could import some of this talent to Toronto," said the evening's first guest speaker, Jan Laughlin. Extendicare's vice-president of Eastern Canada congratulated the volunteers for "contributing something special, helping to make Extendicare Haliburton a little bit more extraordinary. . . . The very act of holding someone's hand is one of the most heart-warming things a person can do."

Residents' lives are enriched by volunteers, who provide them with an important link to the community, she said. "You give the simple gift of listening," and for some residents, "you're all they've got. The staff cannot be everything and do everything for residents. . . . You are truly special people."

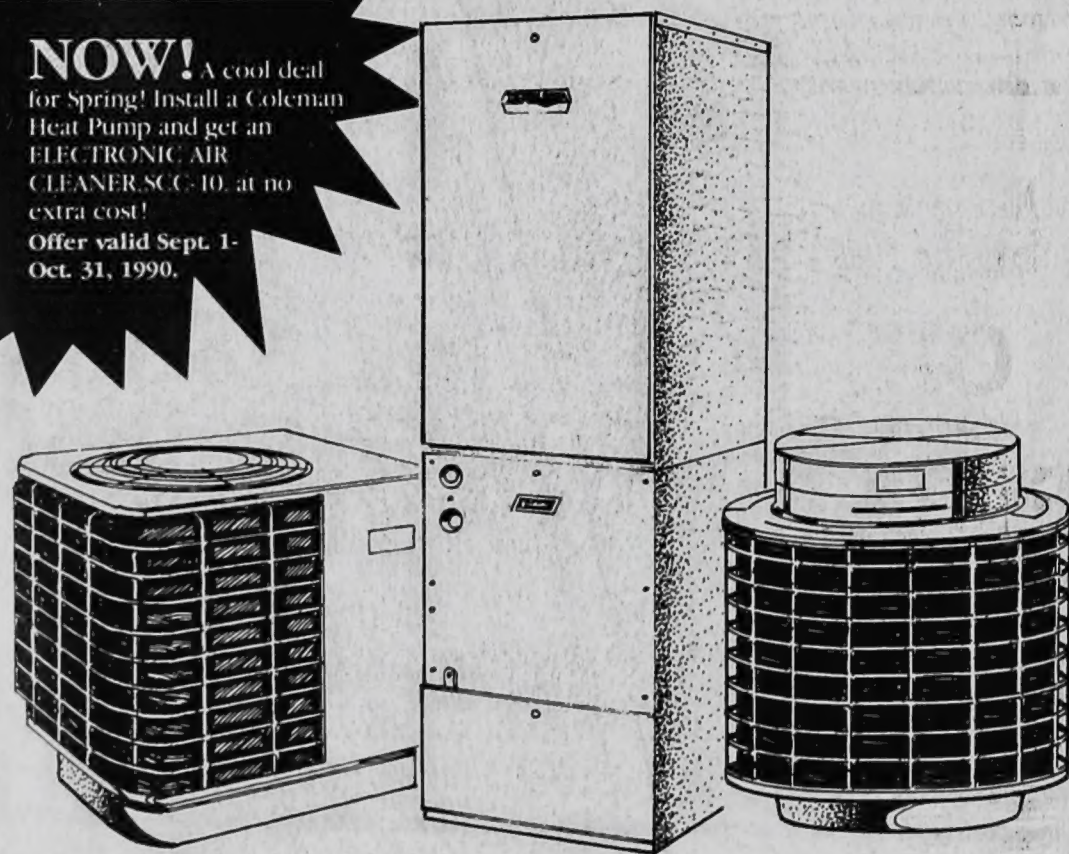

Canada will need even more volunteers as time progresses, Ms. Laughlin says. By 2010, there will be 68 per cent more seniors older than 65, and a 161 per cent increase of those older than 85. The average age of Extendicare residents today is 86.

That means more people will be affected by dementia, and family and staff must learn to cope with that. "It's a very difficult situation for relatives to deal with."

"Environment changes must be made," she adds. "I don't think a four-bed ward is a very high quality of care." Many homes were built years ago and although funds are tight, "we see some light at the end of the tunnel."

Because Extendicare, a private company, offers an alternative to provincially- and municipally-owned homes, and does it at less cost, "if the money was coming from taxpayers' pockets, it would be an enormous, enormous expense."

No where else to turn to:

By listening and caring, Women's Safety Network counteracts violence

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

ANNEGRETH GERRARD DOES NOT tell women to leave their husbands. She makes no decisions for them at all. Instead, she listens and depending on their stories, tells them what their options are.

And there are many stories, each one of them different yet each one the same. They all expose just one facet of a social ill society is just beginning to deal with.

When a woman phones Ms Gerrard at the Women's Safety Network in Haliburton, it's because she needs to break the silence about family violence.

"By the time they phone they're quite ready to talk and they're desperate," says Ms Gerrard, an outreach counsellor. Every month, four or five women gather up the courage to phone the Safety Network for the first time. "Basically they have no where else to turn."

Statistics used to indicate that a woman was abused physically, sexually, psychologically — an average of 30 times before she sought help. With the increased awareness of family violence as a crime, it seems to be getting easier to take the first step to self-preservation.

"Women seek help faster than they have in the past," says Ms Gerrard. Why don't they phone the first time violence occurs? "Women are taught to take responsibility for the whole family. Often they say 'I tried everything and nothing helps so maybe it's not my fault after all.'"

Society reinforces the pressure on the women to stay with her partner. "You must have done something to provoke it," people say. Such a reaction, Ms Gerrard feels, comes out of people's own fear of violence.

"We feel safe if we can blame it on an external circumstance." By taking away a man's responsibility for his irrational actions and placing blame on the women, people wrap themselves in false security: "If I'm not provoking him, then I'll be safe."

As well, "in a paternalistic society where there's a power imbalance, man is condoned for using controls — 'He couldn't help it; his urges were too strong.' If someone has to be blamed, it's usually the women."

"Women are equal under the law but it's the old beliefs system that's hard to eradicate."

However, even if abused women are beginning to reject their culpability, there are still disturbing trends. Surprisingly, in the negative sense, "we see a majority of younger women in their twenties." And whether it's because the crimes are beginning to be reported differently — or are just now being reported — there's an alarming number of men who would rather kill their wives than let go of control over them.

Ms Gerrard has puzzled over the latter and concluded "men aren't becoming more violent, it's just that we're doing something about it."

This ultimate act of violence is in the news of Montreal, where since August several women have been killed by their partners. But it also happens here. "It's basically seen as a lovers' spat. It's never been made clear the reasons behind it. Statistics show one in five murders are domestic. That's a very high number."

People don't like to believe that, but Ms Gerrard's experiences show that it's true.

It's also true that most women can be healed after the violence. Ms Gerrard has an on-going clientele of 10, and of the four or five new women who seek

"I like people to live happy, fulfilled and violence-free lives," says Annegreth Gerrard. "This (violent) type of behaviour is destructive and hurtful and that's no way to live."

help, "some may only need services two or three times and they go on with their lives."

The Women's Safety Network plays an important role in helping them do that. When a woman phones, "she wants to know she's not alone, she's not crazy, she's not making it up, she has a right to a peaceful happy life. They know that violence is not right; they just were not aware others would agree with them."

"Some say, 'I need some legal advice' because they don't know their rights. She realizes she cannot live that way — it's a slow death almost — and she's responsible for her own wellbeing."

"They're also looking for explanations. 'If he didn't drink, things would have been better.' They understand he had an unhappy childhood (and excuse his behaviour because of it.) All of them want to know 'What can I do to help him?'"

Just because a woman is willing to seek help doesn't mean her partner is. "Help is available but their partner needs to want it."

Regardless of what her partner does, the woman needs to start healing herself, and that does not mean she always leaves the violent home. Many of them want the violence to end, but not the marriage.

"I do not ask anybody to leave anybody," Ms Gerrard stresses. "I like people to live happy, fulfilled and violence-free lives in whatever form that takes."

"People need to take responsibility for their actions, look at actions realistically and say changes have to be made. I'm not trying to condemn anyone or break up marriages. I just want them to say this type of behaviour is destructive and hurtful and that's no way to live."

Ms. Gerrard, counsellor St. Pierre and one volunteer are there to help. (Jude King is on maternity leave.) And now, more than in the past, society seems willing to support the victim.

"Having the support of friends and the community is a big step. It's getting easier (to achieve that now.) People are really becoming more aware of the problem and don't say 'It doesn't happen in Haliburton.'"

For those women in Haliburton County who need help, they can reach the Women's Safety Network at 457-3355. There is also a toll-free crisis number: 1-800-461-7656.

Editor's note: November is Family Violence Month and leading up to it, The Echo is publishing a series of articles to highlight the problem — and solutions. This is second in the series.

Residents now able to reach new MPP at Lindsay office

It's taken a few weeks, but Haliburton-Victoria's new MPP is finally getting a constituency office.

The New Democratic Party had never won the local seat before and this is also the province's first NDP government. Getting settled into power is not an easy task. Dennis Drainville is only now getting some staff to assist him serve the riding.

People can reach Drainville at his Lindsay office: 189 Kent Street West, Lindsay, Ontario, K9V 5G6,

Editorials Renewal

The annual meeting of the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce was noteworthy as much for what it wasn't, as for what it was. It was not an evening charged with tension and acrimony. The power struggle that divided the Chamber in 1989 and left many members wondering if the organization could, or should survive, has been overcome. There was no sense of anguish, or anger. Instead, there was a new enthusiasm by the Chamber's volunteer board of directors to build a better community through enhanced economic opportunities not only for tourist facilities, but for other local businesses as well.

This sense of common purpose and shared effort could not have come at a better time. Business people throughout Haliburton County are facing a period of uncertainty. No one knows what the impact of higher fuel prices, higher interest rates and higher taxes will be on the local business community, but already there are signs that the winter of 1991 will be a difficult one. The downturn is a new experience for many retail and service businesses that have flourished through six years of steady economic growth, but it is no surprise to area tourist operators. The tourist industry is troubled in Ontario, and although resort owners are by nature optimistic, the fact is that the continued existence of some area resorts is in doubt.

MPP Dennis Drainville did not succumb to the temptation to gloss over these facts with stale platitudes and empty promises. He admitted what people in the tourist industry — and other small business owners — have known for a long time. High taxes are a burden that drive people out of business and send Ontarians scampering to the States and other foreign destinations in record numbers. The pain of these taxes is felt more acutely by the tourist industry than by any other sector of the economy. They make Many Ontario resorts, including most of those in Haliburton County, uncompetitive in relation to the amenities and prices available in the U.S. and elsewhere. Only at the high end of the market, where people are less affected by an economic downturn, does the resort business cling to any vestige of health, but even here, the value-for-money equation is important.

There may be little the Chamber of Commerce can do to change this situation, but it is nevertheless important that everyone in the business community share a sense of common purpose. It may be small consolation, but it is consolation nonetheless, to know that every local businesses faces similar constraints, and that the prosperity or hardship of one business has a bearing on the success or failure of others. The Chamber is the only organization that can present a unified voice for business in Haliburton County. The fact that it has earned renewed support from the business community is a glimmer of light on an otherwise cloudy horizon. How soon the economic vista will improve depends less on local factors than on government policy. The optimists among economists say recovery will begin in the third quarter of 1991. The more cynical believe relief will not come until a few weeks or months before the Conservatives must face the electorate in the spring of 1992.

However long the recession may last, it is important to have a strong and progressive Chamber of Commerce in Haliburton County. And judging from the atmosphere that prevailed at last Wednesday's annual meeting, it appears the Chamber is back on solid footing.

Generosity

Most of us know that the people of Haliburton County are generous in their support of community life. But it is good to be reminded from time to time just how pervasive and far reaching that generosity is.

The annual awards night at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School provides impressive evidence not only of the generosity of some individuals, but of the concern that countless local service clubs, businesses and cottage associations have with the young people of Haliburton County.

There can be no better investment than the education of young people. Awards night demonstrates how generous local people can be in recognizing students' accomplishments.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

I would like to express my sincere appreciation and thanks to the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce for presenting me with the Highlander of the Year award. I can't begin to express how touched (and surprised) I was by this!

The Minden Techni-cal challenge Sled Dog Derby has certainly grown and flourished over the past seven years, and the Haliburton Highlands has been host to many, many visitors because of this event. The work that goes into this kind of event is monumental, and I certainly can not take sole credit for all of this.

The Minden Sled Dog Derby Committee diligently works year round to put together the sled dog race. Stuart Brandon is the 'idea man'. He comes up with all sorts of creative, wonderful and unique ways to promote, market and run this event. He has taken us above the crowd, so to speak, and put Minden on the map. Jack Brezina puts in many long hours as the print and advertising person. His talents and know how in the business have given this event the professional reputation it has come to be known for. Susan Wilson lends us her creative talents by writing up all the press releases and race information that are sent to media people all over the world about this race. Without Susan, we would not have the kind of spectatorship and media coverage we now enjoy. My husband Steve provides us all with the sound wisdom of how to put on a good sled dog race. He sets up the trails, grooms them and makes sure that all the technical aspects of this event are up to international requirements. And, of course, he also trains our own dogs all year so that we can race too.

During race weekend, over 100 other energetic volunteers give freely of their time, talent (and body heat) to make this race a success. Without them, all our plans would remain on our kitchen table, and there would be no race.

In working together, this County has the capacity to do anything it wants to! We have the talent, the know how and the human resources to make things happen.

For myself, being surrounded by such wonderful people makes me realize that there is no other place on earth I would rather live.

Thanks to Bill Payne and the Chamber for this honour.

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

MARTHA PERKINS

MY UNCLE AND AUNT from Saskatchewan were visiting a few weeks ago. Stories were told, and one of them was about my uncle's retirement speech. For years, he's been manager of a large forestry operation near Prince Albert. First it was owned by a private company. Then the government took it over. Then the government changed so all the policies changed. Then the government sold it back to a private company.

In the midst of all this came a growing awareness of how we are treating our natural resources. An inquisitive eye was turned towards the company — was it destroying the forest for profits, was it a wise steward or a thoughtless pillager of nature? Often, the public's eye was a video camera lens and its ear was a reporter's tape recorder.

When he retired, my uncle said there were two groups of people he looked forward to never having to talk to again — politicians and journalists.

Family being family, you make exceptions. He doesn't mind talking with me, and I don't mind believing he isn't environmental wickedness incarnate. But that can only happen because we trust each

FEIR PLAY

CREIGHTON FEIR

Creighton Feir is on holidays, so this week's Feir Play is written by Martha Perkins.

NOW IS THE TIME of year you hear many seniors, and not-so-senior seniors, say "See you in the Spring." Haliburton's winter charm holds no attraction for these Snowbirds, who have given up on shovelling their driveways and putting bags of sand in their car trunks for those extra slippery hills. The only sand that will get in their cars now is from the beaches of Florida.

But the southern climes can have their imperfections as well. Dr. Rene Benoit, Haliburton's optometrist, thought seniors might be interested in a recent issue of The Orlando Sentinel. Under the headline "Mosquito lab has swarm of virus queries," it details doctors' efforts to understand "the largest mosquito-borne epidemic in more than a decade — the spread of St. Louis encephalitis. The virus lives in birds, is picked up by mosquitoes and can be spread through a mosquito bite to a human."

"The disease causes inflammation of the brain and spinal cord. Some people just suffer from a headache and fever but in others the disease can cause severe neurological problems, seizures, comas and death."

Many of the people bit by the disease have been seniors, and Dr. Benoit cautions them to be careful until after the first frost, when many mosquitoes are killed. People should avoid sitting outside after sunset and if they do, wear long-sleeved shirts and long trousers and spray exposed areas with mosquito repellent.

Just think — there are no mosquitoes in Haliburton in the wintertime.

Not everyone is lucky enough to be able to spend their winters under the warm sun. But at least they can make do by taking a week or two's vacation. Many people seem to be finally getting the opportunity to relax after a busy summer, amongst them, or so it seems, half the Echo staff. Deb Bates just returned from lunching with "George and Barbara" at their Kennebunkport home (or at least that's what her post card said) and we're not sure where Creighton is spending his well-earned vacation. Although we're glad to see him rest and relax, we certainly are looking forward to his return — especially the people who have to write his column while he's away. It's difficult to capture Creighton's special vernacular and way of seeing the world. No one can write Feir Play like he does.

You may wonder why we don't mention more vacationers in this column. We're afraid that among Creighton's readers are some who would use the friendly tidbits as an excuse to enrich themselves by breaking into the holidayers' homes — and not to water the plants. So we only mention people's holidays once they have safely returned.

Artist Gary Chapman had to leave his Mountain Lake studio last week for a few hours. The Lindsay chapter of Ducks Unlimited, a wetlands preservation organization, has chosen this popular water-colour painter as its Feature Artist of 1990. On Thursday, they held a special fundraising gala, which included an auction of Mr. Chapman's painting "Morning Fly Past", which shows two ducks coming out of the mist. Although he had donated the painting, Mr. Chapman's stomach was in knots when the bidding started at $300. He had no reason to fear, however. A few minutes later, a happy connoisseur out-bid them all at $1,125. All proceeds went to Ducks Unlimited.

Newspaper staff sometimes get asked the oddest questions. (One caller at 11 o'clock one night wondered what we were going to about the CBC television news report about Kuwait escapees.) On Monday, Bruce Birrell dropped in and wondered if we knew anyone who could read Russian. His wife, Primrose, had just received a letter — written entirely in Russian. The Birrells can speak French and East Indian languages, but this time they were stymied. (If you'll remember, a few weeks ago we had a story about Mrs. Birrell's successful, if small, restitution bid 73 years after her grandfather's company in Moscow was taken over by the Bolsheviks during the revolution.) Surprisingly, by the afternoon the Birrells had indeed found a county resident who could help them.

Here, there and everywhere... Friends of Chuck and Janet O'Neil were at a get-together at the O'Neils' "weekend retreat" on Glen Lake last Saturday night. We're glad to hear Walter Thomas has recovered from his heart attack and is back to leading his usually busy life. Our congratulations to the many high school students who received accolades and awards at the recent Awards Night ceremonies. There weren't as many people at the high school's Open House on Saturday, but it takes time for word to get around to graduates. Teacher Ann Varty deserves a lot of praise for her efforts. Congratulations are also in order for Debra Dart and Glen Carter, two local thespians who won awards in the weekend's adjudicated theatre festival in Lindsay.

When push comes to shove

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

HE WAS ABSOLUTELY ENGRAVED. As he drove home from town his knuckles tightened on the truck's steering wheel and he almost lost it on one curve near the lake. Of all the nerve. He knew she was home but just wouldn't answer the phone and he must have called at least ten times during the day. But no, just to spite him, she refused to pick up the phone. Well, they'd get a few things straight once he got home and that was for darn sure.

It had been brewing for quite a while and this morning it came to a head. He was fed up with working all day and coming home to no supper, a messy house and his laundry still scattered all over the bedroom. And then, once the kids were finally asleep and she was finished making lunches, doing the dishes and God knows whatever other chores she found, all she wanted to do was go to bed. She was his wife, wasn't she?

The warning had been there. This job idea was fine at first. Sure the extra money was great. That's how they were able to get the new furniture. And the kids looked better than ever, if the youngest was 'farmed out', as he had put it, to a babysitter. But he had told her in no uncertain terms that just because she was out working, she better not think she could let everything else go to pot. The place was a disaster and she didn't have any time for him.

And then this car thing. Yes, it was her money, but if she wanted the damn job so much, she had to have her own wheels. Her hours weren't regular, working part-time like she did, and he had better things to do than be a taxi service at all hours of the day and night. But the car was an even bigger mistake than he had at first imagined. Just the thought of it caused him to hit some gravel at the side of the road. Straightening the wheel, he tried to concentrate on his driving. If he went off the road tonight, would she care? No, she'd probably accuse him of stopping at Jack's for a quick drink on his way home.

But now that she had the car, she stayed in town after work some afternoons to see her girlfriend Sheri. Or she'd take the kids over to her mom's for a visit or into the movies for the early show. And there the house sat, needing a good cleaning and his supper not even started. It was like she felt she could do whatever she pleased now. This morning he had set her straight on that one.

It had been the same old story the night before. She was so tired, poor thing, all she wanted to do was go to bed. Mind you she hadn't been too tired to take the dog for a nice long walk, or read the kids a story. Then at breakfast he had announced that she might be late coming home. On her day off! And where might she be that she'd be late coming home, he had asked cold as ice. Well, she had enrolled in this course, to upgrade her skills, as if she had any to upgrade in the first place, and tonight was the first class. When he dared to ask why she was bothering with all this, she had said it was so she could get a better job, a full-time one. Can you believe it? She stood there in the kitchen, on that dirty kitchen floor, beside a pile of his shirts that probably wouldn't see an iron for weeks, and she was talking about being away from home even more? The real killer was she hadn't even asked him if she could do it.

So he blew. Told her exactly what he thought of what she had, or rather had not, been doing in the last six months; that any night courses were totally out of the question and that if she went that night she could kiss the car goodbye. Then she'd really be stuck. To his surprise she didn't back down. Boy, things had changed more than he realized. She told him it was her car, in her name and as long as she kept the payments up, it had nothing to do with him. So then he told her that if something went missing in the engine, some little wire for example, nothing serious but just enough to keep the car from starting, then she wouldn't even be able to work part-time or keep up the payments, for that matter.

This shook her a bit, he could see that. What about the extra money she'd been bringing in, she asked, partly angry and partly scared. She could always stay home and babysit, he told her. Probably clear as much as she did now and they'd have a clean house and regular meals to boot. She said she didn't think he'd touch the car and that was the wrong thing to say. He stomped out the door to the driveway where it was parked. Like a fox she was right at his heels though he didn't let on. Snapping open the hood, he stood there and told her loud and clear that he could do it right then and there. If she wasn't here when he got home that night, she could forget about the car. That's when she got real calm, turned on her heel and went back in the house.

All day he tried to call her and make sure she understood that he had meant business. With every unanswered try, he could feel his blood pressure rising. He was almost home now and in one piece, no thanks to her. If she thought she'd got an ear full this morning, she was in for a real surprise.

The car was gone. After all he'd said, the car was still gone. Shaking with rage, he pushed open the kitchen door. Sure enough, not a smell of cooking food; not even leftovers in the oven. It was awfully quiet. Don't tell me the TV is broken again, he thought going into the living room. It wasn't on. That was strange. The oldest usually went straight from the school bus to the TV. You could set your watch by it. He called his name. No answer.

A funny feeling had started in his stomach. Where's the dog, he wondered. The house was too quiet. He pushed open one bedroom door after another. They were all the same. Empty. Nothing in the closets, only a few toys on the floor. Then he spotted the note on the table.

It said she needed some time to think; about him, their marriage and a lot of other things. So she had taken the kids and dog and gone away for a while. She said she'd be in touch once she got settled and not to try to find her because she wasn't at her mother's.

He couldn't understand it. All he had wanted to do was scare her, keep her in line. Not really sure what to do next, he took a beer out of the fridge and flicked on the TV. He figured she'd be back by morning.

"Beam me up, Scotty!!"

NORTHERN LIGHTS

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

THERE IS SOMETHING to be said for the Enterprise venture; or more to the point, teleporation. "Beam me up, Scotty." What an easy way to get where you're going.

You see, we went south of the border . . . down Buffalo way last week. It used to be just me, but as time has gone by, we've both come to dread the trip through Toronto on the 401, 400, or any other eight-lane, super highway where ninety million cars (at one per person) and ten thousand trucks (puffing black) zig-zag between lanes at forty Kms over the speed limit, threatening to run you down if you don't keep up. By the time you get through it, you have to stop somewhere and rub the tension out of your locked up muscles.

On the other hand . . . if they're not going forty

A sign of old-style rules

CLARKE

IT'S IRONIC TO THINK that, while we're travelling about visiting interesting places whose signs attract us as we go, back home in Haliburton bureaucratic minds will be meeting — and very likely legislating similar useful signs out of existence in our own area.

Last July, in face of criticism about how they were enforcing it, the Haliburton County Roads Committee decided to delay a crackdown on roadside signs under a 1985 by-law they apparently let lay low while everyone forgot about it.

About the time the news story ran, there was a group up at the corner near our place — students in some art course at the summer school, I believe — who were taking photos of the cottager's signs on the trees. They apparently perceived them as an enjoyable part of the local color.

One of the letters to the papers was from an area farmer, who had his signs for maple syrup and strawberries clobbered by the local sign Gestapo — something that never even seems to happen on Ontario highways.

There is no question that enforcement is uneven in our area. Signs aren't supposed to be allowed on telephone poles in Haliburton, and many local people have had their signs removed minutes after they go up.

But then someone rents the Legion for an art auction — prints, not even paintings — and, curiously, they seem to stay up for two or three weeks without any fuss at all.

Advertising, other than in The Echo, is a tough job in this area. There are no outdoor media available, and no local radio outlets easily affordable to the farmer with his syrup or any other small merchant.

Summer-only outfits suffer, not only from sign problems but from being taxed and zoned as though they were there making money everyday of the year. If anyone sees them as part of the tourist atmosphere, they sure do their best to wipe them out.

And what else can we do to make things difficult for our cottagers, too? I get enough visits from people lost trying to find their friends. If the up-tight types who insist on regulating neatness want to, maybe they should look at what has been done by a couple of road associations up our way: a nice frame with matching nameplates for each lot — in order, so you can count your way to your friends.

As I understand it, even these would be illegal in Haliburton County under the rules as they were written. As far as I can figure, our local bureaucrats were swiping their rulebook from the Ministry of Transportation — that fun-loving branch of the Ontario Government that has shown so many indications that they have the best interests of local citizens and businesses at heart.

Anyone can accept the fact that large signs right at intersections that are truly a traffic hazard can be a safety problem. But is there anything more stupid than having an Industrial Park full of local firms — and having the tiny fingerboard sign that is supposed to help people find them hidden away a couple of hundred feet down the road?

Perhaps the county can beat the province to the 90s and emulate forward-thinking states like Vermont, who not only provide neat, standardized color-coded signs for their visitors, but they explain and advertise the service on their road maps!

There are symbols for lodging, food, crafts/antiques, recreation, and an all inclusive good/services category for people with farm-type items and others. And they are available to all — not just the corporate operations — and they even list the distance from the highway to the business. Wow!

That would be good enough for us, if we ever got

Journalism a balancing act

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

other. And I don't blame him that he doesn't trust some other journalists.

A newspaper reporter was doing an "in-depth" series on forestry. Because she seemed willing to listen, my uncle was willing to talk. They spent an afternoon touring the mills and forests, with my uncle explaining the company's principles. When the story came out, not one word of their conversation was repeated. The story was slanted and biased, favouring the environmentalists. My uncle refused to be interviewed by that reporter again.

A television reporter wanted to do a story on something my uncle didn't want to talk about because it involved union negotiations. She agreed to do the story on something else, but then tried to finagle an interview about the contentious interview. My uncle said he'd refuse on camera to say anything.

(As a sidebar: At a "hot" public debate, someone accused the company of indiscriminately tearing down some trappers' cabins, just the type of accusation reporters love to report. My uncle, very angry, asked him "Where?" The other man didn't have an answer.)

The staff at the local Ministry of Natural Resources may have some reservations about being interviewed by The Echo, but I hope that's only because they fear we'll never explain things in enough detail, not that we'll twist their words to make them look bad.

The media has inherent problems when dealing with the environment. Few journalists have a background in the sciences, most having comfortably settled into English courses. And in small-town newspapers, we can't afford — either with time or with money — to have specialists. One morning you're at a council meeting. That afternoon you're interviewing someone about their recovery from a kidney transplant. That night you may go to the Brownies' fly up.

Likewise, we're a "general news" newspaper. We can't focus on one subject and one subject alone — and we can't keep doing it month after month to catch those readers who missed last week's story. (Last summer, we didn't want to see another shoreline improvement story. Enough already.) Readers demand that variety because their community is multi-dimensional as well.

There has to be a balance, and there has to be fairness — on both sides. Journalists can't come into an interview with the story already written in their minds. They can't let their biases come in the way of presenting as many sides of the story as possible. Foresters have to understand that a newspaper will never be able to print everything there is to know about forestry. They have to deal openly and honestly with journalists. Each is simply doing his or her own job.

It's true that we have to think carefully about how we are using and abusing our natural environment. But solutions won't come when each side is entrenched in their separate ideologies. Nature's cooperative with us; we must be co-operative with each other.

Tumble! Redmen Scott O'Neil forces an LCVI runner to drop the ball

Lumbermen cause upset

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

ANOTHER EXCITING WEEK in the M.H.L. and Chip Trueman was once again not here to witness it! Fans and sports readers will be glad to know he's returning next week. Until then...

In the first game, Roberts-Austin Fuels took on Curry Motors and beat them 9-6. The big story of the game came from the oilmen's Erin Nicholls who put away an amazing six goals. Help was provided by Wade MacInnes who had three goals and Steve Roberts, Paul Howe and Rod Sisson who had seven assists between them.

The motormen put up a good fight with Rhys Jenkins scoring two goals and the Hodgson duo, Andy and Chris, scoring three goals between them. But regardless of their show of force, the motormen still fell behind Roberts, who by the way were short a few players.

A major shake up occurred in the second game when Haliburton Lumber managed to take their first big win against Bishop & Wilson with a 13-6 win. Way to go lumbermen!

The big scorers for the lumbermen were Ron Yake and Barry Boice each netting four goals. But they were not alone on the ice, help came from Greg Carpenter who put away two goals. Others who helped out were Frank Powers and Randy Bird, each scoring a goal.

But the surveyors put up a good fight and team member Jim Winn matched Yake and Boice for nets and scored four goals.

In game three Emmerson Lumber took Youngdale Fuels 10-6. The lumbermen's Roy Scott was the big scorer in this game and netted four goals. He received more than adequate help from Derrell Stamp and Brian Mulholland, each scoring two goals. Also keeping the oilmen's goalie busy was Rick Wood.

Juniors should finish undefeated; Seniors must still tackle LCVI

A victory this Friday will give the Haliburton Junior Redmen football team an undefeated season and the Kawartha West title, while the seniors must defeat Fenelon Falls to advance to the Kawartha West final against I.E. Weldon next Thursday.

The juniors continued their domination of the league with a 22-0 defeat of LCVI in Haliburton last Friday. For the seniors, Friday's game provided more than enough challenge, as they managed to grind out a win after a dispiriting first half.

In the first game of the afternoon, the juniors used their size and quickness to maximum advantage, as they have in all five games so far this season.

Neither team scored any points in the first quarter. In the second, the Redmen offense got rolling, marching downfield with five first downs, capped by a 10 yard touchdown run by Chris Greenfield. Corbie Kent tossed to Greg Brohman for a two point conversion and the Redmen led 8-0 at the half.

The second half was all Haliburton, as Jerry Cooper powered in for two touchdowns and snagged a two point conversion toss from Kent. Cooper's second TD came after a 70 yard run from Andy Bacon. The convert was missed, making the final score 22-0.

Cooper and Derek Wilson led the defense, but the Redmen cause was also assisted by strong efforts from Ross Lemon, Andy Bacon, Greg and Peter Brohman, Pat Bradley, Chris Greenfield, Steve and Todd McCracken, Garwood Davis, Jeff Black and Andy Billings.

Coach Gary Brohman said he is "totally optimistic" that the juniors will defeat Fenelon on Friday and capture the Kawartha West title by virtue of an undefeated season. The Kawartha championship will be decided on Thursday, November 8, when the Redmen are expected to meet either Kenner Collegiate or Crestwood in Peterborough.

The senior game was little short of electrifying, as the Redmen rallied from a listless first half to stun the visiting LCVI team with two touchdowns, one of them on a spectacular 109 yard run by Ryan Timbers.

Timbers was the star of the game, grinding out 238 yards in 16 carries to spark an offensive turnaround.

Missing two way player Darren Danylyshen, who is out with an injury, the Redmen were badly outplayed in the first half. They were unable to connect on a series of long passing attempts, and the defense had trouble containing LCVI's 230 pound running back, who carried tacklers downfield with him for crucial gains every time he got the ball.

The Redmen were dispirited at the half, trailing 7-0 and wondering what they could do to get the momentum back. One key was a change in defensive strategy, concentrating less on pass defense than on containing LCVI's running game.

Bad luck continued in the third quarter, however, as Ryan Timbers was tackled in his own endzone after an LCVI punt, and the visitors added two points to lead 9-0.

In the fourth quarter the Redmen had the wind advantage and the pace of the game began to go their way. With six minutes left on the clock, LCVI had first and goal on the nine yard line. Two plays later it was third and one for a TD. The Redmen dug in and stopped them, and got possession after declining an illegal motion penalty.

On the next play, Ryan Timbers broke the game open, straight-arming would-be tacklers and racing 109 yards for a touchdown. Perrin then threw to Craig Bain for a two point convert and the Redmen trailed by just one point.

The senior game was little short of electrifying, as the Redmen rallied from a listless first half to stun the visiting LCVI team with two touchdowns, one of them on a 109 yard run by Ryan Timbers.

LCVI's running game continued to be strong, but they were forced to punt before any more damage could be done. The Redmen punted on their next possession, but LCVI bobbled the ball and it was recovered by Jay Hughes at midfield. After gaining another first down, Perrin handed off to Timbers, who tossed a 35 yard strike to Hughes on the three yard line. Hughes snagged the ball despite the looming presence of an LCVI defender, and went over for the touchdown.

The Redmen decided to gamble on a two point conversion and missed it, leaving them ahead 14-9 and vulnerable to an LCVI touchdown. But the Redmen defense dug in their cleats and negated the threat, giving the local boys a crucial win. Aiding the defensive effort were Jim Hyde, Shaun Perrin, Jason Morissette, Craig Bain, Brian Waller, Walt Griffin, Chris Allaire and Jamie Dollo.

The senior Redmen must win this Friday to advance to the Kawartha West playoff. If LCVI beats Weldon the game would be held in Haliburton next Thursday, November 1. A Weldon win would give them the homefield advantage against the Redmen.

OMHA action gears up for a busy season

The following games have been held over the past weeks: Sunday, October 14: Sutton at Haliburton; Wednesday October 17: Woodville at Haliburton; Thursday, October 18: Haliburton at Minden; Saturday, October 20: Haliburton at Oakwood; Sunday, October 21: Cannington at Haliburton

The Haliburton OMHA Nicholls Novice Huskies had completed power skating, tryouts and two practices. They were ready for some real competition and they got it, playing five games in eight days.

The team consists of 11 players who played on four different teams last season. Returning from last year's team are veterans Mike Craigen, Devon Dart, Greg Forgrave, Cole Glendinning and Mike Morissette. Defensemen Bobby Hebert and Jamie Johnston along with goalie Brian Mulholland came from last year's Tri-County Novice team. Two raw rookies, Chris Nimigon and Ryan Wood, jumped from last year's Tykes and Kenny Ablett from Wilberforce rounded out the team.

The first game of the season was an exhibition match with Sutton visiting Haliburton on Sunday, October 14. Sutton was a good skating team with several games behind them. The Novice Huskies played with them through the first 2 periods but ran out of steam in the third losing the game by a score of 6 to 3.

On Wednesday, October 17 Woodville came to town for Haliburton's first league game of the year. The entire Huskie squad was flat and the score showed it as they lost 7 to 2.

The next night, Thursday found the Huskies in Minden for an exhibition game against their arch-rivals. This was Minden's first game of the season and the Huskies took advantage of this picking up their spirits with their first win by a score of 4 to 1.

Another road game on Saturday, October 20 with the Huskies visiting Oakwood for their second league game. Last year Oakwood was the top team in the division but this is a new season and the Huskies out played Oakwood by much more than the winning score of 3 to 1 indicates.

Finally, Sunday afternoon Haliburton, on two game win streak, hosted Cannington in their third league game of the week. The Huskies went to work early running up a score of 3 to 0 before fading late in the second period allowing Cannington to net two goals. The third, however, belonged to Haliburton as they scored three more times for the win at 6 to 2.

Five games in eight days gave the coaches plenty to work on but the three wins also showed lots of potential for this team for the 1990-1991 season.

Ryan Timbers ran for 234 yards to pace the Redmen on Friday

Jr. soccer team goes out fighting

The HHSS Junior Redmen soccer team found themselves outplayed last Wednesday in their 4-1 loss to Lindsay Collegiate.

The juniors played the improved passing game they have developed in the last three weeks but it was not enough against first-placed LCVI. To the juniors' credit, however, they had been the only team Lindsay failed to beat in regular season play.

Darren Parsons scored Haliburton's only goal with assists to Lutz Haedicke and Mike Morrison. Mention should also go to Jason Leslie and Jeremy MacDuff for strong defensive play.

Lindsay's win means Haliburton will not advance to the playoffs. Nonetheless, the team should be congratulated for its improved record in the second half of the season.

PeeWees suffer their first loss in big way, 5-1

The Haliburton, Keith Jackson Real Estate PeeWees suffered their first defeat at the hands of Oakwood last Tuesday.

Oakwood dominated every aspect of the game and came away with a 5-1 victory. Derek Glendinning scored Haliburton's only goal.

On Thursday the boys travelled to Little Britain to trounce the home team 7-0. Haliburton goal scorers were Tim Stouffer, Tim Keifer and Derek

Teen smokers don't mind taking big risks

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

YOU SEE THEM EVERYWHERE — walking down the street, usually with a group of friends, and usually clad in jeans. In cities, shopping malls are one of their favourite gathering places, or record stores which pump music out onto the sidewalk allowing anyone walking within a two-block radius to hear the sounds clearly. "They" are not a rare species of bird but ordinary teenagers, and at least 18,000 of them will not live to see their 71st birthday. They smoke.

The argument is not a new one. The only thing that's new are the statistics, and they are constantly changing — for the worst.

According to recent studies by the Canadian Lung Association, children can become hooked on nicotine after smoking only three cigarettes.

This point is very disturbing when statistics show that half of Canadian school children have experimented with cigarettes by the time they're 12, and least one quarter of Canadian teens smoke daily.

The 18,000 figure was tabulated from an overall figure of 100,000 teen smokers now aged 15. It does not take into account other teen smokers and if it did, the death toll would be much higher.

The question which almost automatically comes to mind is why do it? If the signs are all there and have been for some time, why do teenagers continue to indulge in a habit which has proven itself to be harmful? The truth is there is no clear cut answer to these questions, only theories.

"It's my life and I can do what I want with it," says one area teen. This 17-year-old has been smoking for the last six years. He says his parents know that he smokes and they are not pleased. "My parents get pissed, but I do it anyway. It never changes."

"It's one of the trial and errors of growing up as a teenager," says Gary Brohman, vice principal of Haliburton Highlands Secondary School. "The truth is most will try it, and some won't stop."

To help curb some of the teen smokers, this year HHSS has banned all smoking on school grounds and has dismantled the student smoking area. However, this has caused students to move and set up an "unofficial" smoking area on municipal property near the old train engine.

Brohman says peer pressure plays a big part in a teen's decision to start smoking and that the school does have in its curriculum a health course for Grades 9 and 10. It deals frankly with the effects of smoking.

"All the cons about smoking are talked about," he says. "The course is taught from a cancer point of view."

By instituting such a program, the high school is using information which the Lung Association says is the key to preventing young people from lighting up.

However well meaning the Lung Association may be by insisting on education as a tool to stamp out smoking, the truth is teens already are bombardad with enough "anti-smoking" propaganda. They can see it on television, hear it on the radio and see it and Roy Boughner, each managing to net one goal.

But the oilmen had their own scorers and nabbing one goal each were Mike Rae, Pat Wilson, Gary Burch and Ken Barry. The remaining two goals were handled by Pete Fearney.

In the last game Vasey Insurance beat Elstone Motors 9-5. The big scorers for the insurancemen included Kevin Phillips who scored three goals. Helping Phillips push up the score were Bernie Upton and Dah Ambridge, each scoring two goals. The last two goals were netted by Drew Carey and Carl Rowbotham.

As for Elstone, Kim Emmerson, who seems to be continuing his scoring run, put away two goals and so did Steve Cooper. The last goal for the motormen was shot by Scott Rae. All in all, a pretty straightforward game.

Well once again, I'm not Chip but that was still this week in the M.H.L.

Season starts with Novice win

The Haliburton Tri-County Novices opened their season with a 6-2 win over Fenelon Falls.

The Player of the game was Scott Curry with one goal and three assists, followed by Shane Campbell with two goals, Logan Roberts with one goal and one assist, Adam Henry and Graham Schakelaar with two assists each, Ryan Kirkpatrick and Danny Koz with one goal each, and Jennifer Cattel and Andrew Brown with one assist each.

Special mention to Adam Wilson and Jamie Doan for good defensive play and outstanding goaltending by Cori Roberts.

It's not 1985 anymore, fellas. We need co-operation not stumbling blocks for our merchants AND any tourists and visitors we manage to attract. Let's hope the delay to November on reviewing the rules is a genuine attempt to be of some help — and not just a way to get past the tourist season before they stick it to the small businessmen again.

Well, it's a nice thought...

gets past the hold-up they're all driving with aggressive frustration.

I'm a lousy traveler. A nice two or three hour ride in the country is about all I can handle without getting uptight. I couldn't drive through that Toronto mess if my life depended on it. Everything happens too fast. There's too many things to keep track of. The first time two vehicles crossed each other in front of me at 120 Kms, one from the far right and one from the far left lane, my heart would go into full arrest.

It's one of the reasons we don't go to Buffalo too often. Last week, on the way back, we tried to find a better, quieter route. We stayed off the 401, but highways 10 and 7 turned into bumper to bumper, stop and go city traffic which is almost as bad. We plan to do a careful map study before our next trip down. There has to be a way to get from here to there without experiencing a nervous breakdown. Problem is, everytime we do go, the city limits have expanded, and the traffic snarl-ups get longer and smoggier. The anticipation of the trip gets increasingly apprehensive.

So, like I said, wouldn't it be neat if we could just be teleported from here to there without all that nonsense? Of course, by the time some genius figured out the technology, only the elite rich could afford it. That, or one of us environmentalists would start complaining that messing around with our molecular structure like that is bad for our health.

Atoms win first battle, 3-1

On Saturday Oct. 20, the hockey season officially began for the Haliburton Tri-County Atoms.

Their first game was played against the Bobcaygeon Mohawks. The first goal came from Bobcaygeon in the first period and was followed by a tying goal in the second, scored by Kevin Harrison and assisted by Amy Wood. The game remained a hard-fought battle until, with 1:52 remaining, Bobcaygeon scored the winning goal.

The players for this year's team are: 1—Andrew Baker, 3—Drew Robertson, 4—Andrew Burch, 8—Matthew Thompson, 9—Jason Henry, 10—Jason Sipe, 11—Neil Paul, 12—Kevin Harrison, and 15—Amy Wood. The team is coached by Gary Burch and managed by Dennis Baker. Best of Luck to this year's Tri-County Atoms!

Babies aren't kids' play!

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

THEY CAN WATCH Texas Chainsaw Massacre and not blink an eye. They can ride their bikes at breakneck speeds. They can do flips and jump on skateboards and laugh when they crash.

But put a two-month-old baby in a teenaged boy's arms and he crumples. This is fear.

"Don't worry, she won't break," Alison Logan says to the Grade 8 boy as he attempts to prepare baby Joanna Logan for a bath.

"It's scary. I don't want to hurt her," says Billy Koz, tentatively holding onto baby Heather while mother Beth Wilkinson looks nonchalantly on.

Over at the next bathing table, baby Iain is being dipped downwards as he gets his hair washed. "Give him a crew cut and a Mohawk," two boys joke. Mother Osk Jenkins favours the towel-dried look.

"He reminds me of Mr. (beep) — bald," someone quips about a wet-haired baby's look.

"Weird" is Chris Andrus's description of his reaction to changing diapers in a family studies classroom. But among his peers, he's an old pro at all this bathing and powdering stuff. He's got two younger brothers and a little sister.

Eventually, the boys and girls in Pat Bain's class at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School learn to relax with their young charges. But their smiles are tempered with the dawning realization that taking care of babies isn't kids' play.

"It's not all fun and games," says Mrs. Jenkins, to which Mrs. Bain adds that this part of the course is "to make students realize babies are sweet little things but a lot of responsibility comes with them."

In an age when many teenagers are becoming parents, this realization can't come too soon. This is the first time Mrs. Bain has included parenting in the curriculum. It gave her a few sleepless nights of worrying, but when a 14-year-old boy told her bringing the total of nine babies into the school was the best thing she could have done, it was all worth it.

For many of the students, the boys especially, this is the first time they've ever held a baby. Large families are a rarity so they don't learn parenting skills as an older sibling. And the course helps to break down stereotypes.

"I wanted to show the boys that it's okay to be...," Mrs. Bain searches for the right word. "Cuddly," says Mrs. Jenkins, adding, "It's something that's not always natural for men."

"It's quite alright to be a dad as well as a father," adds Mrs. Bain.

This week, the students will go to WeeCare, to see what havoc and delights Terrible Twos and Threes can create. Then they'll be paired with a Grade 3 student as they chart the stages of emotional, intellectual and physical growth.

The babies themselves are probably glad the students are graduating to an older age. On the receiving end of quite a lot of attention and handling, their cries filtered down the hallways of the school. Somehow, in 1990 such sounds emanating from a classroom didn't seem out of place.

Sit down, stay awhile

'Chairs' exhibit deserves a standing ovation

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

ANYONE ELSE WHO had been asked to fill a room full of chairs would have lined them up in neat little rows. Or, depending on their philosophy about life, put them in a circle around the room.

But not Doreen Wilson. She painted them purple, glued Smarties all over them, festooned them with Christmas lights and hammered four-inch spikes through their bottoms. That's an artist for you.

Until November 17, Mrs. Wilson's Chairs is on display at the Rails' End Gallery in Haliburton. Instead of an exhibit studying various designs of chairs, this is her humorous and inventive approach to what is too often seen as a functional household accoutrement. With its whimsy-indulgent tone, Chairs is an exhibit you don't have to take sitting down.

Yet one of the first questions you want to ask her is Why chairs?

"(Former Rails' End curator) Elene Freer saw my oil painting of a chair and said 'How would you like to do a whole show on chairs?'" Mrs. Wilson says at Saturday's opening. (That's Elene Freer for you.) "I asked 'Can I do anything I want to?' I thought it would be fun to do something lighthearted instead of serious."

One of Mrs. Wilson's earlier creations was a satirical piece of a bride wearing camouflage, drifting along the runway in a haze of dry ice mist. Other pieces from her university days were influenced by her readings of Simone de Beauvoir, Jean-Paul Sartre and Albert Camus, hardly joy-loving authors.

"I liked the ideas which would come from their books, dreary as they were," Mrs. Wilson says. Yet at the same time she explored their approach to life, she rejected it. As present-day curator Holly Hutchison says, "Doreen has a wonderful sense of humour and is so entertaining to listen to."

"Humour is the opposite side of tragedy and I guess you make your choice," says the artist, who lives in Oakville but has long had a cottage on Gull Lake. "Life is a lot more positive when lived with a good outlook. It's too easy to give into despair."

So as her fellow Canadians give into cynicism over Canada's political state of affairs, Mrs. Wilson creates a chair for politicians. It's straight-backed, painted black. The seat has long and short nails driven through it; the spikes aren't pointed down, but greet the sitter with sharp-edged honesty. There's an unused, as yet, chain and padlock draped over the back of the chair. No local, provincial or federal politician was seen at the opening and may now go out of their way to avoid it when there are others present.

Across the room from the studded chair was an antique commode. Lift up the lid and whose smiling face do you see grinning up at you? Elinor Caplan's. Nestled inside the basin is her picture with the Queen's Park memo of "With the compliments of Elinor Caplan." The former health minister might not see the humour in such an uncomplimentary portrayal, but the people of Haliburton County will.

Such quirks are prevalent in the show. There are chairs on the floor, and pictures of the chairs hanging on the wall behind the chair. There are pictures of chairs hung on a clothesline. There are small pictures of chairs which can be made into broaches. If you buy a jar full of broaches, you get the Mason jar free. On your way out, you can buy individually-painted cards of . . . chairs.

And to think all of this sprung out of a curator's admiration of one painting of one chair.

"I just let my imagination go," Mrs. Wilson says of how the exhibit took shape. "It's like dancing — you invent all the steps."

Once prompted, the ideas kept pouring out. But the ideas were translated into art with a lot of thought and planning. This might have been fun, but it wasn't an excuse to simply fill up a room with old furniture.

Take the Smarties chair (in a story also told on CBC radio's Fresh Air last Saturday morning). First she painted circles on top of the Smarties. All the colour drained out. Then she sprayed them with a bonding agent and painted a new batch. (Did she paint the red ones last?) When she was in Minden, she saw the perfect tiny chair to glue the Smarties onto. That done, she left it on the cottage table overnight.

The next morning, the Smarties were gone — mice don't know the difference between art and food, it appears. These were discerning mice, however. They didn't eat the blue Smarties.

A new batch later, Mrs. Wilson had to decide what to do with the chair. She put it on a mirror. Didn't work. She put it on a tile. Didn't work. She put it on a woven rug. Didn't work . . . but wait a minute.

Mrs. Wilson went out to the boathouse and found a discarded piece of wood. It was painted yellow and then a colourful scatter rug was painted on it. From one corner lies a thread and needle, making the one-dimensional become a little bit more real.

Viewers have to smile. And as the Highlands sky and ground begin to take on the same hue before the snow falls, they have to rejoice. Mrs. Wilson's love of colour — yellow, purple, red — jumps out with gleeful abandon.

As a young artist, she was afraid to approach colour. Knowing it would cause a lot of problems, she stuck to black and white. When her four children were less dependent on her time, she had the freedom to experiment.

"In this grey country, we need colour," says Mrs. Wilson, wearing a dress of black, which in theory absorbs all colour. "When you live in a country where it's cold and snowy, you love colour."

Chairs certainly enlivens the gallery and makes you want to sit down and stay a while.

Doreen Wilson, left, had lots of fun creating 'Chairs' - and gallery volunteer Jan Murray had fun with it, too. One of Wilson's pieces is a collage with a sequined chair (on black velvet, no less) and black boa, which visitors are encouraged to model.

Debra Dart, Heather Scully and Glen Carter with awards

Last-minute curtain call is a winner

by ROGER DART

IT STARTED OUT innocently enough. A phone call early on a fall evening, October 2, to Debra Dart, secretary of the Highlands Little Theatre.

"Debra, this is Allison Jackson calling. As you know I am the Chairman of the Eastern Ontario Drama League's (EODL) One-act Play Festival coming up on October 19 and 20 in Lindsay. I've just had one of the participating groups withdraw its entry and was wondering if the Highlands Little Theatre has a one-act play that could perform?"

"Well . . ." replied Debra, "there is a one-act play that we have been performing in summer dinner theatre for Haliburton County Resort Productions. Its last performance is scheduled for Thanksgiving weekend. But . . . let me get back to you."

A frenzied evening of telephone calls followed. The principals in this play were Debra, actor Glen Carter, director Curtis Eastmure and stage manager Heather Scully. A consensus was reached that it should be interesting, if nothing else. More phone calls followed to the other members of the Highlands Little Theatre executive to see if they wished to have the play entered into the Festival. A final call late at night to Allison in Lindsay — "Count us in."

The EODL consists of local amateur theatre groups throughout Eastern Ontario. One function is the annual staging of a Festival of one-act plays. All member groups are invited to enter the competition featuring an adjudicator who watches all performances. Each evening is concluded by a brief public adjudication of the plays followed by an in-depth adjudication for the casts and crews of the evening's performances.

This fall the Lindsay Little Theatre, to celebrate its 30th anniversary, hosted the Festival entitled Act 1 — A Playful Weekend at the Academy Theatre. The Academy drew raves from the Haliburton crew

Students solve government puzzle

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

The mystery that is local government was partially unraveled Thursday for Grade 4 students from Gooderham Elementary School.

"Can I sit at the head of the table?" asked one inquisitive student, who then took his seat at the council chamber table.

All last week was Local Government Week in Ontario and the Glamorgan Township Office opened its doors for an open house Thursday afternoon.

Five lucky students in teacher Jim Hopkins' class not only received a tour of the municipal office, but each was given the chance to spend the afternoon with township employees to see what they do for Glamorgan.

"They know they have quite a job ahead of them," said Hopkins. Each student had to write a report on what their specific township employee does. The areas covered included building inspector, road superintendent, clerk treasurer, fire chief and land fill attendant.

Once the youngsters finished their reports, they had to present their findings to the rest of the school at an assembly yesterday. Several weeks ago Mr. Hopkins had explained how local government works. He gave his students advice on what questions they should ask their tour guides so that the rest of the students could become better informed.

Local Government Week is sponsored by the Ministry of Municipal Affairs.

Kicking habit 'hard' to do

in the headlines, but the message seems to go unnoticed.

"My mom smokes, so there is not much she can say," says one area teen. She is 15 years old and has been smoking for almost three years. "My father is hates it when I smoke in the house," says another 15 year-old girl, "so he makes me stand outside on the doorstep."

When asked about how she reacts to the "anti-smoking" campaign, the same girl says, "It still comes down that it is your own decision, there isn't anything anybody can do to stop it."

Still another 15-year-old girl standing nearby said although she has only smoked for two years, she has tried to quit. "But it's hard."

"What it comes down is just plain willpower," says Doctor Christina Moga. She says that in the last few years the media has given the impression that a trip to your family doctor is the only way to kick the habit. This is not true.

"We don't have any special tricks up our sleeves," says Dr. Moga. "It is a matter of altering your habits, and knowing that it is going to be a difficult time for you and those around you."

There are many "gimmicks" out on the market, which include hypnosis, pocket calculators and laser treatments, and she says most of them are just that — gimmicks. "There are success stories out there using these methods," she says, "but they are in the minority."

Another popular method to quit smoking is to chew nicotine flavoured gum. This can help by slowing down the withdrawal stage, but even chewing this gum is no guarantee of success.

"To quit smoking is a personal hurdle that each person will have to deal with in their own way," Dr. Moga said she is willing to offer advice to any teens who are interested in trying to quit, but unfortunately none have asked.

Ideally there should not be a need for young teens to need this counselling. Under the Minor Protection Act, it is illegal for anyone under the age of 18 to purchase tobacco from Ontario stores, unless they have a note saying the cigarettes are intended for the teen's parents.

Yet as the teens quoted in this article indicate, most teen smokers are under age and should not have cigarettes to begin with.

Trying to prevent teens from obtaining cigarettes is a continuous battle. As one 13 year-old girl pointed out, she can't afford to buy them herself, but she "bums" them off friends who can.

"Stores are taking a chance if they sell tobacco to minors," says OPP Constable Mike Maybee. Having to provide a note is also not a sure-fire way to help the situation, for fear of forgeries.

Where then does the solution lie? More education? More legislation? If there is an answer, chances are the teens themselves are the only ones who possess it.

“Wings” flys off with many awards for local thespians

who were unused to such a spacious stage, real dressing rooms and above all, the marvellous acoustics.

The Highlands Little Theatre, in its eleventh year, is well known to a large group of Haliburton County live theatre fans. However, it has never before taken a production “on the road”. Rather, it has always set up at one location and performed its entire run there. Now it was not only venturing outside of the County but it was entered in competition against some long-established, well-known, highly-praised theatre groups.

The local play was the comedy “Mother Gets Her Wings”, a very well-written play by David Carley of Peterborough. All of the action takes place in an office on the outskirts of Heaven and is set in the present time. Mother (Debra Dart) has “just” died and arrived at Heaven’s door. She meets, not St. Peter, but her expediter James Niblett (Glen Carter), a bureaucrat. The play’s Canadian references abound, such as when Niblett explains that “God’s discovered that Canadians are the best in the world at this sort of thing (bureaucracy). We’re fair, we’re neat, we just love filling out forms . . .”

Dart, Carter, Scully and Eastmure began to madly prepare. Of first concern was the set. They salvaged what they could from the Hart Lodge stage where the play had been performed through the tourist season. More was needed. A restriction was imposed by the Festival Committee. The stage had to be set-up in 10 minutes and taken down in 5. Beyond the set were the props. The Festival’s adjudicator, Sandy Black, is well known to members of the Highlands Little Theatre as he privately adjudicated their performance of “Barefoot In The Park” one year ago. Picky. Picky. Picky. Details! Details! Details!

The two weeks were a flurry of activity. A transportable, free standing, celestial door was needed. Screens, desks, chairs needed to be painted. Mother’s wings needed refurbishing. An appropriate ambrosia decanter and glasses were needed. A suitable system for displaying the slides needed to be created. Oh yes. The slides. With Sandy Black in mind, a complete re-shoot of the slides needed to be done. While the play itself has only two performers on stage, Mother’s family and friends come vividly to life via the slides and the characterizations provided by the dialogue between Niblett and Mother. Thanksgiving Monday was the chosen day. Roger Dart arrived with his camera loaded with film. Debra, Curtis, Irene Lubowitz, Sherry Scully and David Arnot were costumed and made up. All went well, allowing for the difficulty of matching Lubowitz and the bus from Lindsay

Friday, October 19 arrived. In the afternoon Debra, Glenn Heather and Glenn Scully headed to Lindsay. They had one hour to determine how the set should be set up, familiarize themselves with the stage, lighting and sound equipment. Glenn Scully, the light and sound man, thought he was in heaven when he entered the honest-to-goodness real theatre lighting control booth. But wait. It was impossible to control the lights and the tape machine at the same time. Undaunted, Glen quickly recruited Highlands Little Theatre member Bob Penfold from the audience as his assistant sound man for the evening. Everything was as ready as it could be.

The Festival was officially opened by recently-elected Victoria-Haliburton MPP Dennis Drainville, who announced his intention to spend the evening enjoying the plays.

Finally it was time. Doug Brohm and Roger Dart had agreed to be roadies for the evening and hustled from their seats in front of the curtain to back stage clutching a sketch of the set hastily drawn on the back of the title page from one of the scripts. Heather reminded them that they only had 10 minutes as they positioned the door, screens, desks and chairs on stage along the outlines marked by fluorescent green hockey tape. Glen Scully and Bob Penfold were in the control booth. Heather Scully was in the wings. Now it was up to Mother (Debra) in her third-best dress and Niblett (Carter) completely in white from his hair and beard to his suit, shirt, tie, shoes and the rose on his lapel. As the play progressed Mother asked if everyone went through such an interview before gaining access to heaven.

Niblett’s reply of “Very few get automatic entry. Just newborn babies and the occasional NDPer” drew fits of laughter from the audience, including Drainville.

At the curtain call, an admittedly biased applause meter rated the Highlands Little Theatre’s “Mother Gets Her Wings” as the audience’s favourite of the evening’s three performances. Adjudicator Sandy Black’s public remarks indicated that he too had enjoyed the play and made special mention of the ability of Debra and Glen to capture the speaking patterns of Canadians on stage. A very difficult accomplishment, according to Black.

Following the second evening’s performances the adjudicator took centre stage in the traditional green room to present the awards. Black prefaced his presentations with the reminder that the awards are only a small part of the Festival and that there are so many other positive aspects generated by the congregating of so many people interested in theatre. Regardless, everyone present was anxious to hear the results. In making his presentations Black announced the performers or performances which he had considered to be in the running for each award. A total of 11 awards were presented. The Highlands Little Theatre entry did not qualify for two of these as they had neither students nor supporting persons in their cast. Highlands Little Theatre was mentioned as being in the running for all of the other nine awards and won three of them.

“Mother Gets Her Wings” received the new Penny Arril Award as the best Canadian script, a tribute to author David Carley.

Debra Dart received the Helen R. McGregor Award, a special adjudicator’s award, presented by Black to the performer whom he felt was the best at “speech”. Black explained that to him speech covers a great deal. It is a measure of the performer’s ability to give an appreciation of language, her interpretation of the script and her ability to deliver this to the audience, the ability to use the vocal register moving from the low to the high register as the character’s emotions change. Black felt that Debbie captured the Canadian language. The ebb and the flow. The nuances. The inflections. “She was speaking Canadianese, eh!”

Finally, but by no means least, Glen Carter, as Niblett, won the Nepean Little Theatre Award as best actor in the Festival for his humorous performance proving that Canadians do make the best bureaucrats.

All-in-all a very good showing for the Highlands Little Theatre. They went toe-to-toe with well-established amateur theatre companies which had more time, bigger budgets and bigger crews. And they came away winners.

H.H.S.S. Honours 1989/90

And the awards go to. . .

It was an evening of honours and accolades, of friendship and generosity, as students, staff and the community gathered at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School on Saturday to recognize academic achievement.

Thousands of dollars in scholarships and bursaries were presented to the top achievers in Grades 9 through 13 (OAC students).

The evening's most generous gift came from Dr. Harry Good of Haliburton, who was present to award bursaries of $3000 each to Jamie Bruce and Alison Sisson, both of whom are enrolled in university.

Two other students who have been awarded scholarships to first year university were also honoured. Mark Robinson, who graduated in June with the highest average ever achieved at HHSS, was awarded a Canada scholarship of $2000 annually as well as a Tricolour entrance scholarship to Queen's University. Dianne Garbutt was awarded an entrance scholarship to the Faculty of Music at Wilfrid Laurier University.

Heating in the Winter.
Air Conditioning in the Summer. It's all there, right under our Feet.

If you want to reduce your electric heating bill, look down at your feet. Now look a few feet further. Look at the earth itself. It could be your next source of heating and air conditioning.

Ground source heat pumps are designed to draw heat from the earth and pump it into your home. In the summer, the ground source heat pump reverses its operation. It extracts heat and humidity from your home and pumps it into the earth. The excess heat can also be used to heat domestic hot water or swimming pools and hot tubs.

This is truly the cleanest most efficient way to heat and air condition your home. And while ground source heat pumps cost more than traditional furnaces and air conditioners they soon pay for themselves with savings. That's why today's progressive home builders and renovators are specifying them for their clients.

Call us for more information about ground source heat pumps. You'll see that one of the most advanced technologies in heating and cooling is as old as the earth itself.

Winter is never a boring season

DORSET NEWS

by: PHYLLIS BRISCOE

The last long weekend of this year has passed us by; the foliage is fast disappearing from the trees; our summer visitors have closed their homes here for the winter; and the natives settle in to enjoy the peace and quiet of rural life. Or so it would seem. But don't be deluded into thinking that our village hibernates for the winter. Maybe there isn't the frenzy or rush, rush, rush that there is during the summer months, but Dorset is a very lively place year around. Our new Recreational Centre is a beehive of activity with the different sports and recreational and instructional activities. The various clubs are very active, including the Lions and the Seniors, the Snowmobile Club and so on. Just a difference of form of busy-ness than during the summer months, but we do miss our summer guests.

The Thanksgiving service is always beautiful but seemed more so this year at St. Mary Magdalenes this year as there was a baptism. The church was beautifully decorated, there were still plenty of colored leaves, that with the fruit and vegetables combined to make a lovely scene of fall beauty. There were over 70 in the congregation.

The 5th Sunday in September was celebrated by the churches of the Lake of Bays Anglican Mission at St. Ambrose Anglican Church, Baysville with a pot luck lunch afterward in the church hall. The service was taken by Rev. Ross Kreiger.

The lunch was delicious and afterwards Ed Bew introduced Rev. Kreiger and his wife Muriel both of whom had worked in Africa, for a number of years. Muriel as a Registered Nurse and her husband in clergy work. They had many interesting stories about the way life is in the Sudan.

Art Group welcomes those who can draw

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

This fine weather will be welcomed by Claire Loft and Marian Donovan who are spending the weekend sharpening their painting skills while attending a training session at Bear Trail in Whitney. with their easels set up out of doors, they will be thinking of a fellow artist who last year, while engrossed in capturing the surrounding beauty, heard a movement that turned out to be an inquisitive moose watching the scene with interest. Needless to say there was a quick move to a new location. Claire and Marian are leaders of the Art Group in Harcourt. They are ready once again to welcome all those who love to draw. no fee is charged. Classes on Monday at 7 p.m. and on Tuesday afternoons from 1 to 3 are held in the Harcourt Recreation Centre. For more information call 448-2550 or 448-2617.

About 16 people attended the Monmouth Agricultural Society meeting on Oct. 17. The purpose of the meeting was to decide whether or not the organization would carry on for another year. Ken Noble chaired the meeting. He gave an outline of the amount of work involved in operating a successful Fair. He praised those members whose efforts resulted in many fine displays but mentioned that it was evident that many more helpers were needed to maintain a quality show.

Some interested persons agreed to lend a hand and although greater response would have been appreciated, it was decided that one more year would be added to the Annual Fair. Attendance is down a little from the previous year. The Society is looking forward to a good number of people showing up at their meetings

Ice making is progress at the Monmouth Curling Rink. A meeting of the executive members produced an exciting program that will provide many terrific games. New members are encouraged to meet at the curling rink on Sat. Oct. 27 when from noon until 6 p.m., they can try out the ice and register for the 1990-91 season. Be sure to bring your curling shoes along.

Monday night bingo games at the Legion Hall bring out a dedicated, friendly group of players.

Everyone receives a warm welcome from Pat and Phyllis Gallen while Warren Bowen is known to be an excellent caller. Games begin at 7:30.

Join the line up for 'flu shots. More and more people are realizing how important this is for a safe Winter. It's also time to put up bird feeding stations.

Sympathy goes out to families

COBOCONK NEWS

by: SHEILA LAKE

Mr. and Mrs. Thane Yeo enjoyed a visit to Somerset, P.E.I. recently where they visited Hazel Standy and other family members, and Mrs. Yeo's brother Ed Allen at Moncton, New Brunswick.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Bowins enjoyed Thanksgiving dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bowins and children at Woodville.

Their many friends were saddened to learn of the death of Myrtle Tooze and a few days later Mrs. Ella Caister. Mrs. Tooze died very suddenly at home and Mrs. Caister died in hospital, where she had been ill for several weeks.

Also on the sick list, at home is Myrtle Liscombe. Sympathy goes out to bereaved loved ones and get well wishes to you Myrtle.

On Sunday, Oct. 14th, Clint and Heather Hirstwood, Chris & Megan and my hubby and I enjoyed a birthday party for our grand daughter, Sharon, at the home of Bob and Marilyn Lake at Peterborough. It was Sharon's 21st birthday, and her other grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. David Wood of Scarborough also attended. Later, all of us went to the arena on Sherbrook St. to watch grandson, Robert play hockey with the Minor Peterboro Pete's team.

Edgar Fildey suffered a fractured arm-elbow in a fall and has been nursing a sling on his injured arm. Mrs. Ann Griffin has had surgery and is in Wellesley Hospital in Toronto. Richard Magee had surgery recently. Get well wishes to you who are sick.

The men who go moose hunting in the north, mostly all report a good season, getting at least one or more moose.

The flocks of the Canada geese flying south have been a sound and sight the last week or so. However, some birds are confused! My husband saw starlings busy building a nest a week ago and my sister has a goose on her farm that has laid eggs and is now setting and she says she has never seen or heard of this happening before.

Mr. and Mrs. Rod Harrison of Norland are back from a holiday in the western provinces.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Awards Night brings praise for students

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by: ELEANOR COOPER

Our West Guilford, Eagle Lake and Maple Lake students once again distinguished themselves by diligent work rewarded on Honours Night, Oct. 20, 1990. This year the event was preceded in the afternoon by a school fair of exhibits and sale items. The teachers from this community who supported these events included Judi Notley, Wayne Cooper, and Sid and Louise Cooper.

Craig, son of Pat and Gerald Bain, won the Travel and Tourism award and was a 4-year honour student. His sister Tricia was a 2-year honours student. Dawn Hebert, daughter of Paul and Linda Hebert; Jean, daughter of Perry and Kay Morrison; and Sarah Lilius, daughter of Eric Lilius and Caroline Bishop, also achieved Year 1 honours standing. Dan Chumbley, son of Leslie and David won the Drafting in the Technical Awards and was a Year 1 honours student, as was Ken Hilliard, son of Olive and Calvin Hilliard. Ken won the Mechanical Technology prize as well. Michelle, daughter of Mickey and Mary Simms, complete the Guilford list of Year 1 Honour Students.

Shannon, daughter of Blaine and Joan Sisson, won the Newman Memorial Bursary as a graduate pursuing a nursing career, and was a 2-Year honours student too. Also in the 2-Year honours class were Rebecca Gimmi, daughter of Bobbi Gimmi of Eagle Lake, Gesa Fluegel, daughter of Wolf and Elke Fluegel, and Lynn Bussey, daughter of Nancy Bussey.

As well as being a 2-year Honour student, Angela Fraser, daughter of Vickey and Bob Fraser, won the prize for highest marks in Advanced Level English and in Advanced Level French award. Aleatha Cooney, daughter of Karlene and Laverne Cooney, was a 1-year honours student in her 4th year at high school.

Kendra, daughter of Russell and Doreen Sisson, won the prize of $200. as a student who demonstrated good citizenship and concern for fellow students, and was a 1 year honours student, too.

Colin, son of Bob and Sherron Sisson of Eagle Lake won the Emmerson award of a set of Electrical Tools. His sister Alison won a school letter, received Dr. Good's bursary, is an Ontario Scholar, won the Rotary Bursary, and the Thayer Scholarship for Science. Well done indeed!

Charlie Allison, son of Ralph and Shirley Allison, was the highest achiever in Driver Ed., is a 3-year honours student, the Northernways award technical proficiency in year 4 recipient, the Legion Scholarship for Electricity recipient, and now holds an Honours Society Certificate.

Gerald, son of Perry and Kay Morrison, is a 5-year honours student, an Ontario Scholar, winner of the Lodenquai Scholarship and of the Hewitt Brothers Transp. Award.

Elva Heard contributes the following: On Oct. 6, 1990 Susan Elizabeth Heard was united in marriage to Carl Wallace Anderson at 4 p.m. in a lovely fall wedding at the Eagle Lake Church, Pastor Brian Plouffe officiating. Susan was lovely in her long white gown and wedding veil with bouquet of white and teal flowers. Sharon Griffin, matron of honour, wore a beautiful teal blue gown and matching shoes. Best man was Henry Leschiline. Ruth Still played the wedding music. Ed and Dwight

We are so proud of all of you. Congratulations, all.

Colleen Davison hosted our A.C.W. monthly meeting on Wed. Oct. 17 for the nine who were able to attend.

Congratulations to Alice and Leon Jones and the Mintos on the birth of Keren Elizabeth, new sister for Heather and James Minto. She was born on Mon. Oct. 22nd. Congratulations to all the family.

There as another accident at the junction of Highways 35 and 118. On Saturday, two pick up trucks collided. I wonder how many more before traffic lights are installed.

Mrs. Bill McKay is spending some time in St. Catharines with the Greg Moore's.

Mrs. Jim Harrison is enjoying a holiday in Florida for a couple of weeks.

After service on Sunday morning the Zion United Church congregation gathered in the C.E. building where the choir presented fellow choir members Joan Fennell and Fred Chapple with a home in Kinmount upon their return from the honeymoon in the southern states. We wish the Carl Andersons much happiness.

The wedding of Kathy Brice to Douglas Doede was held in Kitchener on October 20, 1990 and the following people from this area (and from afar) attended: (Kathy is the daughter of Helen (Sisson) and Ron Brice). Erma and Ron Sisson; Marilyn and Iris Gibbon; Aldyth Bishop, Shirley Hewitt and Bob and Debbie Deremo; Valerie and Ken Clumbeley; Leslie and David Chumbley; Kevin and Bev Sisson; Blaine Sisson and Sean Brice.

From England came the bride's uncle, Peter Brice and his wife Margaret, the bride's aunt, Peggie with her son Mark, his wife and family. The couple will reside in Hamilton where, we trust, they will live happily ever after. Best wishes from the friends and relatives in the north to this special girl

A surprise birthday was held for Kay Morrison by her family at their home on Sunday following the service at St. George's. It was arranged by Cecil and Betty Morrison of Bowmanville and was lots of fun.

A beautiful replica of a loon. Coffee and goodies were enjoyed by all. The community extends best wishes to the popular couple on their marriage on Saturday Oct. 27 at Zion United Church.

A bridal shower was hosted by Debbie Thomas on Sunday afternoon for her friend Jennie Tomlinson, whose marriage to Jeff Rogers of Beaverton will take place on November 10th at Zion Church.

COMMUNITY NEWS

MuchMusic comes to HHSS

STUDENT LIFE AT HHSS

by: ERIN LYNCH

HALLOWE'EN IS IN THE AIR this week at HHSS. There are many activities taking place to celebrate it, such as the pumpkin pie eating contest, the pumpkin carving contest, apple bobbing and let's not forget dressing up this Friday. Everyone should dress up -- you don't have to be a child to enjoy Hallowe'en.

This Friday night is HHSS's first Much Music video dance party. The high school has had other video dances but not done by Much Music. This should be good as Much Music has a good reputation. Our previous video dances have been fun, but things have gone wrong such as blurry screens. Everyone at school has been talking about it for weeks. The SAC is going to try to get 400 people out for this dance, something that has never been achieved before. Come on out and dance!

HHSS's first annual Fall Fair and Homecoming was last Saturday. There were many things that took place: craft sale, old yearbook sale (everyone got a laugh looking at some of our teachers ten years ago, and how they have changed.) Other events included volleyball in the gym, and computer art. Unfortunately there wasn't the turnout everyone had hoped for.

The Junior football team is undefeated so far! The Juniors have an excellent season. Maybe we're looking at COSSA "AA" champs this year. A good example of their winning style was shown in last Friday's game against LCVI with a win of 22 to 0. The seniors also had a victory of 14 to 9.

The cross country running team travelled to Port Hope last Wednesday for a Kawartha meet. Two midget girls, Melissa Forgrave and Sheena Horning, placed in the top 20 making them eligible for COSSA this week. Way to go!

Post office will be missed

KINMOUNT & AREA NEWS

by: MILLIE MOSS

Belated birthday greetings to Vi Crego of Kinmount, seventy-six years on Friday, October 5. On October 4, her daughter arrived from Vancouver Island to spend a week. Hope you're having a nice holiday Shirley White! Thanks to Keith and Cecile Shettler of Kinmount for the ride to Toronto to pick Shirley up at the airport and taking her back to the airport for her return home to Vancouver Island. I hope by this time

"REALTORS KNOW THEIR NEIGHBORHOODS."

Some may think that real estate is just a piece of land with a building on it; each property, though, is unique in its features, and very special to its owner. One of many REALTOR services is the special knowledge of the neighborhoods in your community and the properties within them.

When choosing a REALTOR, you have the opportunity to select someone with that knowledge of either your own area-if you're selling your home-or the one where you plan to live. In any event, your REALTOR will make sure that your expectations are met.

...and that can make a REAL difference!

REALTOR is a trademark which identifies real estate practitioners who are members of The Canadian Real Estate Association and as such adhere to a strict Code of Ethics.

October sees many celebrations your cold is a thing of the past Vi and that Albert is feeling better.

Other birthdays and we hope you all had happy ones: Marg Viney of Kinmount, also on Friday, October 5, Amy Coker of Utterson, October 17, her granddaughter Christine Coker of Huntsville also October 17, Donna Stroud, Bob Childs October 17, Norland, October 17 and Jason Moss on Friday, October 19.

Don't forget the Norland Area Seniors Bazaar/Bake Sale at the Norland Community Hall on Highway 35 from 1 p.m.—4 p.m. on Saturday, November 3. Any donations would be gratefully received. Hope to see you there.

Winner of the Norland Volunteer Firemen's Hockey Pool for Saturday, October 13 was Russell Graham of Norland.

If you have a small short haired female dog you would like to see get settled in a good home you may call 454-3816. Also someone else is very interested in getting a pair of large, preferably steel, wagon wheels. These folks are away from home for a short while but if you can help them out you can leave a message with me at 454-2395 and I will see it is passed on soon as they arrive back home.

By the time you are reading this our Norland Post Office will be history past. As of October 18 Norland Post Office as we've known and liked it will be gone. That is, until some time in the future things will turn around again. And it will be decided another Post Office is sorely needed here. Oh well, what else can we expect? Billions in debt but let's close the schools, the Post Offices, the hospitals — we can build new ones! Why can't they leave things alone?

Nice to see Syd Alcus of Kirkfield out and around again following her most recent illness.

Norland Area Seniors cordially invite you to come to Fenelon Bowling Lanes each Wednesday at 1 p.m. and to the Craft classes held at the Norland Community Hall each Thursday at 1 p.m. followed by the card games beginning at 8 p.m.

Well folks stay well and happy and give me a call at 454-2395

Tea party was enjoyed

SENIOR LEAGUE

by: WINNIFRED BARNUM

Hello folks! Another month is almost gone and it is Thursday again, and another tea party has been provided by the Martha Group of the United Church of Minden. The ladies who served the tea party were Bea Berry, Annie Kernohan, Lorraine King, Maude Coulter and Elva Deacon. To live up to the party Elva Deacon played many old songs, so we could join in. We spent an enjoyable afternoon, and thank the ladies sincerely.

That evening Marge Prentice and Shirley Howe came to call bingo for us. We thank them and appreciate the ladies spending their time to help us spend ours.

The entertainment for Happy Hour was by Bill Geddis, Lloyd Madill, and Carmen Peters. Doris played the piano when she wasn't doing other duties. At intermission the Residents Council presented Janke Thomas with a gift to thank her for her volunteer duties. Janke came to Minden about two years ago

Divorce the old bag.
